Twelve Quizzed On Dress Rule

By MARCIE MacDONALD

General approval of the dress rule for men's dormitory dining halls was expressed by ten of 12 students interviewed by the inquiring reporter this week.

Five answers to the question "What is your opinion of the dress rule for men in dining halls?" expressed approval of the rule for both Sunday dinner and weekday dinners. Five students felt that there should be a rule for Sunday only; and two did not feel any dress rule at all is necessary.

Dean of Men To Hear Three Traffic Violators

The Traffic Court Tuesday referred three persons to the dean of men with the recommendation that their cars be sent home.

Of 31 cases which were scheduled to appear before the court, ten did not appear.

In these cases, fines for violations are automatic unless the person can produce a legitimate excuse, James Dunlap, Traffic Court chairman, said.

In cases of excused absences from hearings persons are rescheduled for the next court session.

Of the 21 persons who appeared 51 violations were accounted for. One person who appeared had eight traffic violations recorded, Dunlap said.

Thirty of the 51 violations were fined, making a $51 total. Five persons who had third and fourth violations under extenuating circumstances were sent to the dean of men without the recommendation for sending the car home.

Three persons were given suspended fines, and two persons were dismissed with a warning against future violations. Eight violations were acquitted by the court.

The general ruling for traffic violations is that a person pays $1 for the first offense; $4, second offense; and for the third offense, the person is referred to the dean of men, often with the recommendation that his car be sent home.

2 Grads Complete Basic at Quantico

Joseph Browne of Darby and Arthur Crow of Towson, Md., are among newly-commissioned Marine 2nd Lts. completing five-month basic training at the Marine Corps Schools, Quantico, Va. Both men are graduates of the University. They have been assigned to Cherry Point, N.C.

Richard Woodrow, Naval Aviation Cadet, recently graduated from the U.S. Naval School, Pre-Flight, at Pensacola, Fla. Before entering the training program Woodrow attended the University. He is now assigned to the U.S. Naval Auxiliary Air Station, Cory Field, Pensacola, where he is engaged in primary flight training.

Honoraries Set Concert For Sunday

Works of early composers will be featured in a joint concert to be given by Phi Mu Alpha, men's national music honorary, and the Louise Homer Club, women's local music honorary, at 3 p.m. Sunday in Schwab Auditorium.

The program, arranged by George Black, president of Phi Mu Alpha, and Mary Kelly, president of the Louise Homer Club, is open to the public, free of charge.

A string quartet will open the concert with Mozart's "String Quartet No. 19." Included in the quartet are Joan Else, Lenore Babbione, Luella Cook, and Stanley Green.

A flute trio, composed of Richard Stinson, Arthur Bates, and Thomas Williams, will play a Bach fugetta and a march from "Titus" by Mozart.

"Paduane VI" (Isaac Posch) and "Fantasy No. 1" (John Jenkins, 1592-1678) will be played by a brass quartet made up of Richard Brady, Donald Lambert, Roger Staub, Robert Jones, and Edwin W. Gamble, instructor in music.

A piano duet, played by Robert Klug and Elizabeth Stuter, will follow the intermission. They will play the first movement of Mozart's "Piano Concerto."

A largo from Haydn's "Opus 76, No. 5" and McKay's "Joyful Dance" will be presented by a woodwind quintet composed of Mary Meyer, Frances O'Connell, William Mills, Richard Potter, and Charles Biechler.

A combined chorus from the two groups will close the program singing "Crux Fidelis" (John IV, King of Portugal), "Welcome Sweet Pleasure" (Weelkes), and "An Evening Hymn" (Purcell).

Ryan Found Guilty Of Assault, Battery

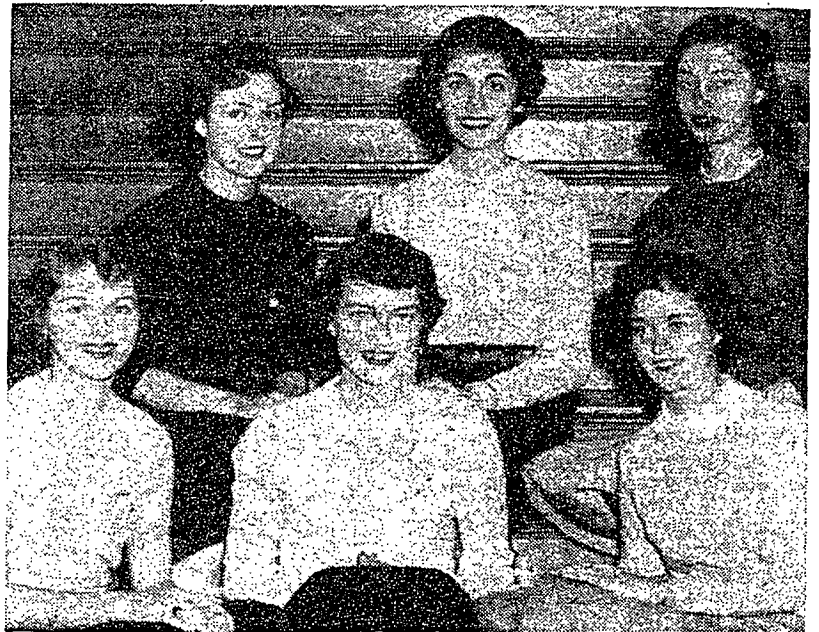

Charles Ryan, former student at the University, was found guilty of assault and battery in Centre County Court Tuesday, in connection with the assault of Jack Whigham, of the borough, last December.

Ryan was originally charged with assault with intent to rob, but was found guilty only of assault and battery. He was fined $100 and ordered to pay costs by Judge Ivan B. Walker.

prove of the rule. Going to college is a socialization process in addition to training in special fields. Dressing for meals is one of the good things men are expected to do after their college years, so why shouldn't they get used to the idea here?"

Barbara Cartwright, fourth semester home economics major: "I think the dress rule is a good thing. Fellows usually have to dress up for meals at home, why not here? The girls in dormitories have dress standards too. I think the boys have no complaint."

'Queen' Votes Total 246

Two hundred and forty-six votes were cast yesterday for Penn State's representative in the Pittsburgh Press campus queen contest. Voting from 8 a.m. to 5 p.m. will continue today and tomorrow and until noon Saturday at the Student Union desk in Old Main.

Penn State's queen will be chosen from six finalists—Alyce Cheney, Maureen Flannery, Louise Justin, Mary Pera, Carlene Samuels, and Marjorie Schenck.

Pictures of the finalists are posted in the lobby of Old Main and in a window of the Athletic Store.

Finalists were chosen from 99 candidates on the basis of their photographs. No personal interviews of individual candidates were conducted. Contestants in the Press intercollegiate contest will be judged on the same basis.

Coeds entered in the contest may still pick up their pictures at the Student Union desk in Old Main.

A special picture of Penn State's queen will be taken by the department of public information and forwarded to contest headquarters in Pittsburgh.

Pictures of candidates from the 30 competing colleges and universities in the Tri-State area will appear April 11 in the ROTO section of the Press. Press readers will select the final winner by sending in ballots printed in the Press. A full-color picture of the intercollegiate queen will appear on the cover of the ROTO section sometime in May.

Players Will Treat Audience To 'Gay Twenties' Atmosphere

By EDMUND REISS

When Players present their adaptation of Frederick Lonsdale's comedy, "On Approval" at 8 tonight at Center Stage, the audience will be treated to a farce with an atmosphere of life during the Roaring Twenties.

Tickets for the show are on sale for $1 at the Student Union Desk in Old Main and at the door.

Based mainly on character types, this comedy of manners is the story of an heiress and her friends. Although the setting for the play is England and Scotland in the 1920's, it could be anywhere and anytime since the type of people represented are found all over the world, and their problems have a universal appeal.

Maria Wislaek, played by Ann Wylie, is an aging widow-heiress, who still imagines herself young and attractive. She had lived an unhappy life with her former husband and believed that he was the cause of her misery. She tells her friend, Helen Hayle, portrayed by Betsy Jones, that if a man ever proposes to her again, she and the prospective husband will live together for a month.

If at the end of this experimental period, each party decides the other has measured up to his expectations, they would get married. If not, they will have had a good time with, as Maria says, "no harm done."

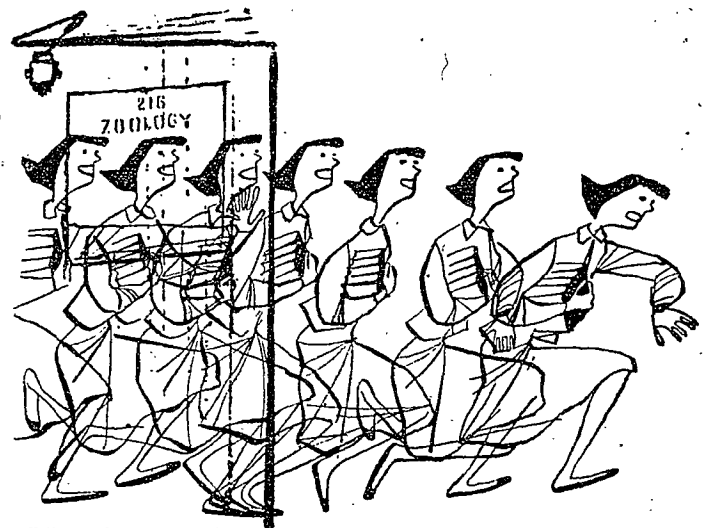

Richard Halton, played by Leonard Tarnowski, has had for twenty years a smoldering passion for Maria, but being overshy, he has never told her of his feelings. Finally, reinforced by the arguments of his friend, the Duke of Bristol, he gathers up enough courage to tell Maria he loves her.

Myron Cole plays the part of the duke.

Immediately Maria acquaints Richard with her ingenious plan, and the two prospective mates journey to Maria's country home in Scotland, accompanied by the two friends, Helen and the duke, to spend a month together on approval.

Maria and the duke are both the same kind of person, in that they are selfish and inconsiderate to the feelings of everyone including their friends. Helen and Richard decide that they must help these two, and they come upon a plan designed to make Maria and the duke fit people to live with.

The language of the play is sparkling and full of farcical witticisms. In farces the author usually finds it difficult to bring his work to a close, but that isn't the case in "On Approval." Lonsdale's construction fits perfectly with the rest of the play.
