

Spring Week Rules Reviewed

No more than two organizations will be permitted to combine as a group in the participation of the Spring Week program, George Richards, chairman, has announced.

If more than two groups organize as one entrant in the activities, major problems will arise, he explained. The committee's final decision was in the face of these problems, he said.

Joint Dining Planned by WD Council

West Dorms and Thompson Hall will begin a program of informal weekly exchange dinners March 17, Richard Bowers, food and menu committee chairman of the West Dorm council, announced yesterday.

McKee, Hamilton, and Thompson dining halls will each serve one third women and two thirds men under the exchange dinner program.

The exchange dinners on a weekly basis have been approved by Mary E. Brewer, assistant dean of women; Pluma C. Reeves, supervisor of the West Dorm dining halls; and Gladys P. Gummerson, head hostess of Thompson Hall, Bowers said.

The dinners will continue as long as the students cooperate in attending, Bowers said. They will be held every Wednesday except for one week a month, the week the Thompson women have a formal "dress-up" dinner.

This is the first time weekly programs of exchange dinners have been held at the University, Miss Brewer said. She said that exchange dinners in other areas might be possible if there is enough student interest.

Members of the West Dorm council have volunteered to act as head waiters for the dinners without pay, Bowers said.

The new plan replaces the old system, considered a failure, which provided for exchange dinners in the area on an irregular basis, usually once a month. Dress was formal.

Having the dinners more often and making the dress informal is an effort by the council to make the dinners more popular with men and women, Bowers said. Thompson women reported to the council that formal dress was their main objection to the old system.

Prof to Review 'Easter Story'

Harold E. Dickson, professor of fine arts, will discuss "Religion and the Easter Story" at a fire-side discussion at 7:30 p.m. Monday in McAllister lounge.

Dickson will trace the ways of picturing the crucifixion of Christ through the early Christian period of art, the Middle Ages, the Renaissance, and finally to the modern period.

He will illustrate with the use of slides how the crucifixion was portrayed from a mystical symbol to realism.

Student chairman for the fire-side discussion is Audrey Neff. The firesides are sponsored by Panhellenic Council, Leonides, and the Penn State Christian Association.

The discussion will be open to the public.

Walker, Pepinsky Attend Conclave

Eric A. Walker, dean of the College of Engineering and Architecture, and Raymond Pepinsky, research professor of physics, are participating this weekend in a conference at the University of Illinois.

Both industry and education will be represented in the conference. A decision will be made on whether or not work in solid state science should be introduced into the undergraduate program of American engineering colleges.

The American Society for Engineering Education and the National Science Foundation are co-operating in the program.

Each double organization who wishes to participate may enter only one candidate in each of the three contests—the He-Man contest, the Ugly Man contest, and the Miss Penn State queen contest.

Twenty-five points for the sponsoring group will be awarded entries into the He-Man and the Ugly Man contests. The five finalists in the Miss Penn State contest will each receive 100 points for their sponsoring groups.

Booths in the carnival will open at 6 p.m. on Wednesday and Thursday. Spotlights will be played on the field on Tuesday night to enable groups to set up booths early, Richard Grossman, chairman of the carnival committee, said.

The site of the carnival, May 13 and 14, will be in Windcrest. Last year the festival was held on the parking lot behind the Sigma Nu and Sigma Chi fraternities.

All organizations are asked to give each of the names of the combined group to the spring week committee by March 31. Individual group chairmen are asked to address their forms to Richards at the Student Union desk in Old Main.

Ray Hartsough of the American Friends Service Commission, Philadelphia, will show slides of work in summer camps in East and West Germany at 7 p.m. tomorrow at the Friends' Meeting House, 381 S. Atherton street.

These camps are sponsored by the Friends Commission and offer summer jobs to interested students. Camps are maintained in this country for the purpose of painting and repairing homes, schools, and churches; building community centers; and other facilities from which all people in the community will benefit.

Overseas projects include removing debris from ruined villages, clearing land to be farmed by refugees, and improving housing conditions.

Hartsough will be available for student interviews on Monday and Tuesday. Appointments can be made at the Penn State Christian Association, 304 Old Main.

Competition began last month in high schools throughout the state. Winners of three sections will compete here. The winner of the state title will compete in sectional competition leading to national finals. The winner will receive a four-year scholarship to the University, the University of Pittsburgh, or Temple University.

The subject is the United States Constitution, and each contestant will deliver a ten to 12 minute prepared oration and an extemporaneous talk from four to six minutes.

George Copella, eighth semester civil engineering major, has been elected president of Pollock Council.

Other officers are vice president, Howard Sauders, special student in physics; secretary, John Akers, second semester agricultural engineering major; treasurer, Joseph McHugh, fourth semester division of intermediate registration student; and representative-at-large to the Board of Governors of the Association of Independent Men, Duane Holm, eighth semester forestry major.

2 Housing Assistants Appointed

The appointments of two assistants in the Department of Housing were announced yesterday by President Milton S. Eisenhower.

John F. Fishburn, who has been with the department since 1950, was named conference and occasion coordinator. Francis H. Gordon, recently relieved from active duty with the U.S. Navy at the Naval Air Technical Training Center, Norman, Okla., was named room assignment coordinator.

Otto E. Mueller, director of housing, said Fishburn in his new position will handle arrangements for scheduling conferences held by off-campus groups at the University. University faculty or staff members in charge of arranging campus facilities for off-campus groups will work with Fishburn. Gordon will be in charge of room assignments in men's residence halls.

Fishburn, a native of State College, is a graduate of the University, and was a teacher of vocational agriculture and general science in Montoursville High School for two years prior to his entry into the U.S. Navy during World War II. He returned to campus in 1946 as assistant to the free assessor and since 1950 has been with the Department of Housing.

Born in Akron, Gordon received his B.S. degree in commerce at Grove City College in 1950. He was a federal and state tax accountant with the Clymer State Bank, Clymer, N.Y., from 1950 to 1952. Gordon served with the U.S. Navy during World War II and was recalled to duty by the Navy in 1952.

Cabinet Approves Customs Changes

All-University Cabinet Thursday night passed an amendment to the All-University Constitution making it possible for customs violation cases to be appealed to Tribunal or the Freshman Regulations Board depending upon the sex of the person being tried.

The amendment contains the provision that the action of Tribunal or Judicial shall be considered final, subject to an appeal to the Senate committee on student affairs subcommittee on discipline.

In other action taken Thursday night, cabinet moved to untable and place in committee a proposal to investigate town housing conditions. This proposal was tabled at last week's cabinet meeting after considerable debate concerning the feasibility of such an investigation.

Committee Appointments
Richard Lemyre, All-University president, appointed Leonard Goodman, Marshall Donley, Robert Schoner, Harry Sawyer, Ross Clark, and James McDowell to serve on the committee.

Marie Wagner, a member of Red Cross committee, gave cabinet a report on the committee's recent activities. She reported that the committee took a group of students to the Altoona Veterans Hospital Feb. 15 to entertain the patients. Costs for the trip were paid by the local Red Cross chapter, she reported.

Miss Wagner reported the committee will sponsor a blood drive April 26 to 28 in the Temporary Union Building. Army, Navy and Air Force ROTC units will be donors for the drive, she said.

Class Gift Committee
Lemyre appointed the members of the senior class gift committee. They are Carolyn Pelczar, chairman; Edith Burt, and Donley. Lemyre appointed Richard Gibbs, chairman of the class night

Former Student Is Investigated In Shooting

The Dean of Men's office is investigating the connections of Leonard Gold, a former sixth semester business administration major, in the shooting of Mrs. Anne Starr, Coburn, early Sunday morning.

Frank Auman, 55, Colyer, is being held on charges of assault and battery with intent to kill. He waived a hearing Thursday before Justice of the Peace Guy C. Mills. He was committed to the Centre County jail when he gave himself up Thursday morning.

Auman said he shot Mrs. Starr because he "wanted to scare that fellow away" from the car where Gold, Mrs. Starr, and two of her children were sitting. Mrs. Starr was shot in the right forearm by a .32 caliber revolver, the Centre Daily Times reported. Her daughter, Alice, 10, suffered a superficial chest wound. Mrs. Starr is in Centre County Hospital, but her daughter was discharged, the newspaper said.

committee, and Neida Fralich and Jerry Kintigh as members of the committee.

Here's Your Chance to Sleep And Breeze Through Bluebooks

By DON SHOEMAKER

The first round of bluebooks has gotten under way. Many Penn Staters are already walking around campus with that bleary-eyed expression that comes from long, sleepless nights of cramming.

Cramming for tests used to bother A. W. Turnbow too—that is, until he invented his sleep learning machine. After that, he never had a bit of trouble.

In fact, Turnbow, who graduated from Nebraska College last June, recently made the statement that he slept his way through college.

It came as a surprise to his professors, who had once predicted he would flunk out. But he didn't, and last week he disclosed his secret.

Turnbow said he had read a lot of articles on the theory of sleep learning. The only trouble was that none of them told how to go about it. So Turnbow tried some experimenting on his own.

Was Flunking Out
He decided he had nothing to lose. He was working at a full time job and trying to carry 19 credit hours besides. He had been told he was flunking out. So he made a sleep learning machine. Time has proven that he didn't lose anything, either. According to Turnbow, he owes his college degree to his experiment.

"It was hard for me the first few weeks," he said, "but anyone can learn while they sleep if they stick to it."

"I remember how my buddies laughed at me when I told them about sleep learning," Turnbow said. "But when I started tossing around five syllable vocabulary words, formulas, dates, and complete passages from Shakespeare, they changed their attitude."

Sleep Learning Easy
Turnbow holds that sleep learning is the easiest way to get an education. He claims it will revolutionize the whole process of education.

Turnbow tried his first experiments on his Russian course. He read two thousand Russian vocabulary words into the sleep learning machine, complete with English translations. Results were so successful that he soon was using the method in all his courses.

Turnbow decided that others should have the benefit of his experience. As soon as he graduated, he organized the Sleep Learning Research Association in Omaha, Neb.

$50 Sleep Machine
He recently wrote a book called "Learn a Language While You Sleep." The book tells the complete story and how to make a sleep learning machine for as little as $50.

So, there's hope yet. If you haven't slept for a couple of weeks, or if you're just naturally lazy, sleep learning may be the thing for you. At least you will have an excuse for sleeping in class.

Seniors! Don't miss this!

Three 6x8 graduation photos, usually $12.00, now for only $8.00.

You can't afford to miss this!!
