'Salesman'

cate the terrible emotions that at long last cause Willie's downfall. In almost any other play Slakoff might have been a great success, but here the part requires a more sensitive, delicate and understanding treatment than a person of his age and experience can give.

This fault of not being able to portray their roles to the extent that the play required was also apparent in all the other actors with the possible exception of Elizabeth Ives, who plays Linda, Wilkie's wife. As the hardworking, constantly suffering housewife she reveals more of Willie's personality conflicts than Slakoff himself is able to do.

One of the finest scenes in the play is when Linda tells her sons that Willie is trying to commit suicide. In this, Miss Ives reaches down into the situation of the drama and draws out the real tragic meaning that playwright Miller is trying to put forth. When telling her sons why they should at least respect their father, she says that Willie "never was a success, he never made a lot of money, he never got his name in the paper, and his character isn't the best, but he's a human being."

The best example of Miss Ives' fine insight into the tragedy is the final scene of the play when, dry-eyed, she stands at Willie's grave and talks about him. A scene such as this is a very effective means of proving an actor's merit, and Miss Ives comes through with flying colors.

One of the greatest assets of by Russell Whaley. As soon as the play is the fine set designed the play begins, his semi-abstract design catches the fancy of the audience. The only restriction to a set of this kind is that the lighting must be excellently handled or the play will lose its effect. Through sloppy lighting, the mood, which had to be constantly maintained in this case, was lost and the audience had to adjust themselves to the scene all over again. Another aid to the atmosphere of the play was the music which fit perfectly the actions and speeches of the characters.

Although Players' production of "Death of a Salesman" has lost much of the quality which made it a great play, it still retains enough merit to be an experience to people who want to see one of the world's greatest modern dramas.

WD Workers Voice Protest

A signed petition from 54 employees of the West Dining Hall Department of Food Service protesting the release of a co-worker has been submitted to President Milton S. Eisenhower.

The petition protests the release of Mrs. Anna Hartsock, a relief cook. Mrs. Hartsock was hospitalized last October following an accident while on the way home from work.

The petitioners have requested that Mrs. Hartsock be reinstated and her life and hospitalization insurance be continued. The petition also asks that the University inform her of her right to disability benefits. It is requested that she be given a leave of absence until October.

(Continued from page one) mothers and chaperones were deemed financially possible, the men questioned the existence of a sufficient supply of them. They said it would be impossible to keep all the houses chaperoned by adults week after week. Even obtaining 51 part-time housemothers seemed improbable, they added.

Schott was also asked to present President Eisenhower a request for longer hours when women could be in fraternities and a request for more lenient choice of chaperones. The presidents expressed particular interest in reducing the requirement that alumni chaperones be alumni of ten years standing.

(Continued from page two) weekends are ridiculous." Thayer Potter, sixth semester education major: "Housemothers are out of the question for some time yet, but part-time housemothers might work out. The IFC should try to work out a more practical compromise."

Harry Holm, fourth semester electrical engineering major: "The code is 'not too clever'. The housemothers part is ridiculous, the houses here simply don't have the facilities. Chaperones would be hard to get for every weekend. The code is more trouble than its result would be worth."

Richard Crafton, eighth semester arts and letters major: "The code as it is will put undue hardships on the fraternities, I think."

David Grove, fourth semester ceramics major: "I think the fraternities are getting a raw deal. Gradually, all our privileges are being taken away."

Robert Schlegel, sixth semester electrical engineering major: "Housemothers would put a prohibitive financial drain on fraternities—their salaries and accommodations would be quite expensive. Otherwise the code seems to be a good system. However, I'm sorry to see unchaperoned dating go."

The Bazooka, or Rocket Gun, was given its name by American soldiers who thought it looked like a musical instrument played by a radio comedian.

Union Talk--

Dixon said yesterday he had submitted a letter to Fortunato asking for an opportunity to meet with Samuel K. Hostetter, comptroller, and Mildred A. Baker, Food Service director. He said he does not feel there is danger of any trouble unless the talk, which he hopes will take place the first of next week, proves fruitless.

Last night Fortunato said he had talked to Dixon who told him he would further investigate the employees' problems before finally requesting the conference.

Fortunato said he understood the trouble in the dining hall arose when an employe was asked to change her day off because another employe was absent from work. The other employes, Fortunato said, misunderstood the situation and thought the woman was being shown favoritism in being allowed to choose her day off. Explanation cleared the trouble, he said.

George Smith, union secretary who drew up the letter said this was the second such incident in two weeks. He said the first occurred in McElwain Hall when some employes were preparing to walk out and called Dixon who refused them permission.

Smith said the trouble in Nittany began at 6 a.m. Wednesday when some employes refused to go to work. He said they called out Bernard F. Mehall, supervisor, who talked with several of the employes, and George Sones, union steward, and the walk-out was averted.

At noon Wednesday, Smith said, several employes started to walk out and Sones persuaded them to stay.

Miss Baker said yesterday afternoon that she had heard nothing about the trouble in the Nittany area. She said she had had a conference earlier with Fortunato who hadn't mentioned it to her. She said the relationship between the food supervisors and personnel is such that if the situation had been serious she would have heard of it.

MEET YOURSELF-- 10 YEARS FROM NOW

Ever wonder what you'll be like when the class of '54 holds its 10th reunion? If you started to work for one of the Bell System companies after graduation, here's a pretty good idea.

INTERESTING, RESPONSIBLE WORK: Perhaps a Commercial Manager, the company's representative and spokesman to as many as fifty thousand customers. Or a Transmission Engineer, helping to provide the telephone needs of an entire state. Or a Supervisor in the Traffic Department, responsible for the speed and quality of local and long distance service in several cities and for the personnel relations of a large number of employees.

WE MAKE SURE THERE ARE PLACES TO GO: The number of college men hired is related to the number of administrative and technical positions expected to be available in the next 10 or 15 years. It is our policy to fill these positions from within our organization.

ARTS, SCIENCE, BUSINESS ADMINISTRATION AND ENGINEERING GRADUATES are among our particular needs. The specific degree is not as important as the total effect of your college training.

NO MATTER WHAT YOUR MILITARY STATUS, contact your Placement Officer soon for details on the opportunities for employment with the Bell System.
