Camps Offer Summer Jobs With Vacation

By AL MUNN

Have you made plans for your summer job yet? If not, consider spending the summer in one of the many camps throughout the country.

A summer camp job offers a vacation with pay, opportunities to save money and broaden social contacts, a chance to work with students from other schools and countries, and blessed relief from books, schools, and cities.

Summer camp jobs include many things besides the usual counseling jobs. Students are wanted for administration positions; handymen, office workers, kitchen help, lifeguards, craft heads, and music leaders.

Camp counseling includes many different fields, including woodcraft, hiking, waterfront and campfires. Most important, it offers a chance to work with people.

For those interested in saving money for school expenses next year, summer camp work is perfect. There is a social life without having to spend too much money for dates and clothes.

The camp and resort division of the Student Employment office has information on 123 camps in 14 states available to students.

When applying for jobs, the division advises sending personal data, education, previous experience, and service records to save time and unnecessary letter writing. If possible, pictures should be included with applications.

'Outdoor Living' To Be Discussed At H Ec Weekend

Outdoor living will be one of the subjects for discussion at the 5th annual Home Economics Spring Week-End program April 9 and 10.

Grace M. Henderson, dean of the College of Home Economics, announced that Lucy Goldthwaite, field editor of McCall's magazine, will speak on "Let's Live Outdoors, Too."

The week-end program brings homemakers, professional home economists and high school students to observe the work of the college and to get helpful hints from films, lectures, and demonstrations.

Sorority Suites To Be Blessed With 'New Look'

By CECILIA JOHNS

Nineteen sorority suites will soon have their faces uplifted for the first time since they were opened in 1948 and 1949.

New drapes will replace the old; arm chairs, sectional furniture, and sofas are to be upholstered; and walls will get new coats of paint.

This is the first time that the suites have been redecorated. The use of the suites was begun in 1948 when Simmons was opened and a year later, McElwain also began serving Penn State coeds.

Prior to the use of suites, cottages, now used by students in Home Economics, were used by the sororities.

The decorating scheme to be followed was chosen by a representative of each group, an alumnae, and Mr. O. E. Mueller, director of housing. Only two sororities chose the same shades of self-seems to indicate a case of self-expression and individuality.

The service branch of the Department of Housing expects to reupholster about 120 chairs, 12 sofas, 15 sets of sectional furniture, and to replace some lamps and shades. The carpeting is to remain the same.

Some of the sororities are planning to purchase the draperies themselves. However, the University does furnish all basic furniture for the suites. The sororities are free to purchase pianos, radio-phonographs, and lamps.

When the fall semester begins, all work on the suites should be completed and then the sorority women can sit back to enjoy pleasant thoughts of new classes and of course, rushing.

Marriages

Paulsell-Janssen

Mr. and Mrs. J. W. Janssen of Bethesda, Md., announce the marriage of their daughter Lillian to William G. Paulsell, son of Mr. and Mrs. L. O. Paulsell of Olney, Ill.
