Ag Landscape Will Be Shown In Philadelphia

Blooming flowers, grass ready for the lawn mower, and blossoming trees will be moved from campus this weekend for an exhibit in the 1954 Philadelphia Flower Show, Monday through April 2 at Convention Hall.

The booth, operated by students in the Departments of Floriculture, Ornamental Horticulture and Landscape Design, will be composed of flowers and trees native to Pennsylvania.

The display will contain a 3-foot stone fence, along the 25-foot background, a rail fence, gate, flagstone walk, and a pool of water running over a rocky glade. Around the pool will be grass grown in flats in the greenhouse.

A ten-foot redbud tree, a 12-foot hemlock, a birch tree, and a mungo pine will be used in the Philadelphia display. Flowers in the exhibit include violets, skunk cabbage, hepaticas, snow drops, bleeding hearts, mountain laurel, azaleas, crocuses, iris, daffodils and narcissus. They have been nurtured in the greenhouse so they will be in full bloom for the show.

Company Aids In Car Check

Campus Patrol Capt. Philip A. Mark has reported that Irwin and Leighton Construction Co., who are building the Student Union, has posted a man at the entrance to parking area 23 in an effort to keep employees from parking there illegally.

The action was taken when the patrol complained after finding 14 cars there yesterday when they should have been in area 50, Mark said. It is not the first time the trouble has been encountered. As high as 50 construction workers have been tagged for occupying places not allotted to them.

Mark also said traffic on Pollock road during class hours has been reduced to a near minimum since the patrol started its campaign against violators two weeks ago. Arrests now rarely number over two or three a day, he said.

FMA Meat Plan To Be Explained

Letters to explain how the Fraternity Marketing Association's meat purchase program will operate when it goes into effect Thursday will be mailed today to participating fraternities, Harold W. Perkins, secretary of the association has reported.

Nineteen fraternities will purchase their meats through FMA for the remainder of the spring semester. Members of FMA not participating in the program may join the program at any time, Perkins said.

According to Perkins, fraternities will buy meats through the three jobbers who have agreed to enter the program. The jobbers will bill FMA, and FMA will pay the jobbers in one sum and then bill participating fraternities.

AIM Board Approves Proposals

The Association of Independent Men's Board of Governors Wednesday night gave final approval to recommendations for amending the AIM constitution. The board put the recommendations in the form of an amendment and approved them in the first reading of the amendment. The recommendations were presented last week by Robert Harding, chairman of the AIM reorganization committee.

Councils Must Approve
To be written into the constitution, the amendment must be approved by a two-thirds majority at two consecutive meetings of the board. If it is accepted, it must be voted on by three-fourths of the dorm councils.

Harding presented four recommendations to the board. Three were accepted at last week's meeting. The fourth, dealing with reorganization of the AIM Judicial Board of Review was accepted at Wednesday's meeting, after it was amended.

Judicial Recommendation
The original recommendation called for four board members-at-large to be appointed during the spring semester, with four more appointed in the fall, one from each living area.

The Board of Governors amended the recommendation to read that all eight members of the judicial board will be appointed at large in the spring semester. The chairman of the judicial board will also be appointed in the spring by the president of AIM, with the approval of the Board of Governors. Other members will be appointed by the president of the judicial board. The amendment also states that the judicial board president shall be a sixth semester student at the time of his appointment.

Other Recommendations
The other three recommendations, approved last week, provide for:

1. Compensation for AIM officers. The president shall be compensated to the amount of $100 and any expenses deemed necessary by the Board of Governors. The vice president will receive $25 and the secretary and treasurer $50 each. Compensations will go into effect next fall and will be for one year.
2. Enlargement of the executive

It's a Date...

A "DATE" is the issue here as JoAnne Kratzert sells tickets to men in the Nittany Dining area for an IFC-Panhel Ball date with beauty-queen Joan Hunter. The contest winner will escort Miss Hunter to the ball April 2. The prize for the winning woman will be a date with Joseph Barnett, junior class president.

'Hints' of Bribery Charged by Wade

Lewis Wade, State Party candidate for All-University President, has released a statement charging that "hints" were made that he would receive political position next year if he would resign as candidate.

Wade released the statement in explanation of his resignation and subsequent decision to remain on the ballot March 18.

He said he had been convinced by others on March 17 that Robert Smoot, defeated candidate for the Lion Party nomination, would be a better candidate for the State Party because he was better known.

Wade said he had been told a majority of the members of the State Party was not behind him.

Later, he said, he found this was not true.

Joseph Barnett, junior class president, had a conference with Wade about 1 a.m. on March 18. According to Wade, Barnett told him that Barnett and Donald Herbein, president of Skull and Bones, senior men's hat society, were concerned because they believed Benjamin Sinclair, Lion Party clique chairman, was "getting too much power."

They said that to stop Sinclair, the Lion Party candidate for president would have to be defeated, Wade said. And, he continued, they said Smoot had a better chance to win the election than he did.

Cooper Describes Orientation Of Anti-Red POWs in Korea

By TAMMIE BLOOM
The overall effectiveness of the United Nations orientation program for Chinese and Korean anti-Communist prisoners of war cannot be completely determined until ten or 15 years have passed, Bernarr Cooper, audio-visual adviser to the UN, said last night.

Cooper, speaking before the Radio Guild, described the program of education which was used in Korea to teach democratic methods and attitudes to approximately 120,000 prisoners of war who refused to return to Communist-dominated countries.

When the prisoners were turned over to the Indian command after the fighting in Korea stopped, 65 per cent of them said they felt they had benefitted from being prisoners under the United Nations command, Cooper said. Thirty-five per cent said they felt their future potential had been increased infinitely beyond what it would have been had there been no war.

Prisoners Screened
The 150,000 prisoners held by the United Nations in April, 1952, were carefully screened to determine those who were violently anti-Communist. About 120,000 said they would resist to death being returned to the Communist side, Cooper said.

Those who held violent anti-Red convictions were housed in 14 separate compounds and subjected to the education program, he explained.

The program strove to orient the prisoners to democracy by enlarging upon the Oriental pattern of family relationship. Cooper said. The men were taught that through their responsibility to the family they were also responsible to the community, to the nation, and to other nations, he said.

Told of UN
Under the program, Cooper said, prisoners were told of the functions of the UN. They learned about the members, and about the agencies of the UN which would benefit them if they assumed a responsibility to the community in which they would live after they were released from the prisons, he said.

There were certain aspects of the program which could have been more successful, Cooper said. As an example, he explained that the Orientals refused to accept the policeman as a positive part of the community. In the East, according to Cooper, the policeman is an arrogant and much-feared community member, never to be trusted by the people.

Daily Broadcasts
During four to six hours of the day radio broadcasts were made into the compounds. The educational portions were semi-documented programs designed to present material in a subtle manner.

Entertainment was also included in the broadcasts, Cooper said, most of it furnished by the prisoners themselves. Each compound had its own dramatic and choral groups and its own band, he said. The instruments used in the bands were home-made from old rations cans, he said.
