

Holden, Hepburn Win Movie Oscars

William Holden and Audrey Hepburn, the movies' favorite guy and gal, won Hollywood's top acting Oscars Thursday at the 26th annual Academy Awards presentation.

The movie "From Here to Eternity," tying the all-time record of eight awards, was named the best picture of 1953.

Holden, who played a semi-heel in "Stalag 17" was both happy and upset about his first Oscar. He was happy for winning the top honor, but said he was "very upset" for having to rush his acceptance speech due to the television time commitments.

"They told me to say thank you and get off," he said, "but I wanted to give credit to Billy Wilder, the director of 'Stalag 17,' for having so much faith in me. I think they could have held off the closing commercial a little longer so that everyone could know how much Wilder was responsible."

Miss Hepburn, in stage makeup for her Broadway role of a water nymph in the play "Ondine," received her award in the New York portion of the show. Her award was for her first starring role in "Roman Holiday."

Visibly touched, the 24-year-old ex-ballerina said, "I am truly, truly grateful."

The sex- and violence-filled "Eternity" captured awards for sound recording, film editing, cinematography, screenplay, direction, and supporting actress and supporting actor in addition to the best picture.

Frank Sinatra, climaxing a thrilling career comeback, and Donna Reed won Oscars for the best supporting roles for their performances in "From Here to Eternity."

How the stars got started ☆☆☆

Alan Ladd says:

"I was a Hollywood stagehand. One day I fell 20 feet off a scaffold. I wasn't hurt, but I decided acting was safer.

I went to acting school, played bit parts ... finally I hit pay dirt in "This Gun for Hire."
