Greek Coeds Lack Home Ec Equipment

By DOTIE STONE

If home economics equipment is like Greek to you, it would be even worse if you were studying home economics at Pierce College near Athens, Greece, according to Irene Athanassiadou, graduate assistant in home community relations.

Irene, who was sent to the United States by Pierce College to study home economics so she could return to teach, finds a lack of equipment will be her major problem.

Irene wrote to her mother, who is teaching a foods course at Pierce, to find out what equipment is needed, so she could buy supplies to have sent to the school. Instead of sending a list of what was needed, her mother found the only way out was to list present equipment.

For the three courses offered, foods, sewing and child care, the school has one second-hand range, one table, a set of cupboards, and one hand-cranked sewing machine. All three courses are being taught in the day-students dining room, which presents the problem of keeping 30 girls busy for the two hour class period.

University Equipment

At the University, there is one sewing machine and complete kitchen unit for every two girls in each class. In addition, the College of Home Economics has many different makes of home appliances for study and special laboratory rooms.

Irene realizes that one of her biggest problems will be adapting American methods of teaching to those inferior conditions.

Irene received her B.S. degree in home economics after only two years from Montana State College, and will get her master's degree from the University this spring, after one year of work. Before she came to the United States, she graduated as a business administration major from Pierce College.

American People Helpful

Irene said she has found American people most helpful during her stay here, not only because she was sponsored by the Home Economics Club and Phi Upsilon at Montana State, but in their willingness to help her locate equipment to take home.

During a visit to a high school in New Jersey, the head of the Home Economics department told her they would send a treadle sewing machine to Pierce as a home economics project. A graduate student at the University has written to her school in the Midwest to get more equipment sent to Pierce.

Miss Athanassiadou explained that electric sewing machines were not as desirable as the old treadle models, because her students could not afford electric machines for home use.

While she has been in the United States, Irene has been asked to give speeches to various groups about twice a week.

Matrix Table Honors Coeds In Activities

Outstanding women students chosen as Quill Girl, Cap Girl, and Matrix Girl, will be honored at the Matrix Table at 6:30 p.m. April 12 in the Nittany Lion Inn.

The Matrix Table is sponsored annually by Theta Sigma Phi, women's national professional journalism fraternity.

Quill Girl was chosen by vote of women students during the Women's Student Government Association spring elections. Candidates for the title were Nancy White, WSGA president; Barbara Wallace, Women's Recreation Association president; and Betsy Siegler, president of Mortar Board, senior women's hat society.

The title of Cap Girl will be awarded by members of Theta Sigma Phi to the woman who has participated in the most varied and largest number of activities.

Theta Sigma Phi members will also choose the Matrix Girl, a woman who has served the University without recognition by women's hat societies.

Deadline for Matrix Table reservations is noon Saturday. Returning student teachers may make reservation until 5 p.m. Monday. Reservations are $2.75 each and may be obtained at the Student Union desk in Old Main upon presentation of an invitation.

Approximately 195 women students and 40 members or wives of administration, staff, and faculty, have been invited.

me," said the dark-haired student, "but I'm not as shy now, and it has been a wonderful experience."

Irene wears a perfectly plain gold band on her left hand, which she recently received from Greece. She explained that in Greece when a couple becomes engaged, both the girl and boy wear a gold band on the left hand. When they are married, it is changed from the left hand to the right in the wedding ceremony.

As many other foreign students have commented, the thing that has shocked them most is the free dating of American youth.

Senate Will Discuss Activity Point System

The proposed women's activity point system will be discussed and a new Judicial and Freshman Customs and Regulations board will be appointed by Senate of the Women's Student Government Association tonight, Nancy White, retiring president, said.

Old and new members of Senate will meet at 6:30 tonight in the WSGA room, White Hall. The new WSGA officers and senators were installed at the WSGA convocation last week, but they will not officially take over their duties until after the Easter vacation, Miss White said.

The committee investigating the point system will present a report. Under the point plan, women would be given activity points for any campus offices they hold. Each woman would be limited in the number of points she would be allowed to accumulate.

Proponents of the point system say that it would allow more equitable distribution of major positions. Those against the system say more capable women would be denied positions they deserve because they had already accumulated their activity point quota.

This report will be correlated with a report from the WSGA survey committee. Questions on the point system were included in the WSGA survey sheets distributed to coeds in living units last week.

A new Judicial and a new Freshman Customs and Regulations board will be appointed, Miss White said. Judicial is responsible for interpreting WSGA regulations and authorizing penalties for infractions of these rules.

Eight women, four seniors and four juniors, will be named to Judicial. Sophomore women comprise the customs board. Joyce Shusman, sixth semester education major, was appointed Judicial chairman last week.
