

White, Ungetheum, Mason New Record Set Awarded Matrix Honors For H Ec Weekend

By NANCY WARD

Nancy White, president of the Women's Student Government Association, was named 1954 Quill Girl at the annual Matrix Table in the Nittany Lion Inn last night. Jane Mason, president of the Home Economics Student Council, was Cap Girl and Eleanor Ungetheum, former personnel manager of the Daily Collegian, Matrix Girl.

Bess Furman, Washington correspondent for the New York Times, discussed "Washington Personalities" at the dinner sponsored by Theta Sigma Phi, women's journalism fraternity, to honor outstanding women students. Members of Theta Sigma Phi presented "Campus Briefs," an original parody skit on campus events. Approximately 155 women students and members or wives of the administration, staff, and faculty attended the dinner.

Club Shown Art Slides By Dickson

By NANCY FORTNA

To prove that the Easter theme in art has changed many times through the ages, Harold E. Dickson, professor of fine arts, showed a series of slides yesterday before the Faculty Luncheon Club.

Beginning with slides of art in the early days after the crucifixion, Dickson told his audience that first the cross was pictured without Christ. He said in the early days there seemed to be an aversion to picturing Christ on the cross.

Around the fifth century, the actual Crucifixion was portrayed, he said. At first Christ was pictured with open eyes, Dickson related. Four nails held Him to the cross. Christ's side was at one time portrayed as being pierced on the left, he said.

Mary and St. John were at first pictured together on the left of the cross, Dickson said. Longinus, the soldier who thrust the spear into Christ's side, and the man who offered Christ the sponge and vinegar, were pictured to the left of the cross.

The professor explained this was changed with Mary and Longinus on the left and St. John and the man with the sponge on the right. The left side signified the church and the right side signified the synagogue or the rejected old order, he said.

Dickson also showed the symbols which were used with the crucifixion. Moses was shown in one picture as striking the rock from which water flowed and above him was Christ with blood flowing from his side. Christ was also symbolized as a lamb being sacrificed on the altar.

Voting Starts For 'Press' Campus Queen

Students may vote now for the final winner of the Pittsburgh Press Campus Queen Contest by using the ballots printed everyday in the Press. There is no limit to the number of ballots each person may send in.

Penn State's entry in the contest is Alyce Cheney, second semester education major, who was chosen from five other finalists in March by student vote.

A total of thirty queens from colleges and universities in the Tri-State area are entered in the contest.

A full-color picture of the final winner will be published on the cover of the ROTO section of the Pittsburgh Press sometime in May.

Mission Officer To Give Talk

Ruth Isabel Seabury, educational secretary of the American Board of Commissioners for Foreign Missions, Boston, will visit the campus April 23-25.

She will speak at a student dessert supper 6:30 p.m. April 23 at the Alencrest Tea Room and at the Evangelical and Reformed Church, April 25. Reservations for the dessert supper may be made until April 21 in 204 Old Main.

Miss Seabury recently returned from a four months' visit to Africa where she collected material for a book.

legian, Miss Ungetheum combined such activities as Home Economics Club; Omicron Nu, home economics honorary group; and Home Economics Student Council. She is secretary-treasurer of the Home Economics student-faculty board; candle editor of Phi Upsilon Omicron; associate editor and business manager of News and Views.

Miss Furman, in discussing Senator Joseph R. McCarthy (R-Wis.) said she does not think McCarthy is the "hydrogen bomb" of politics he is reputed to be. She said she thinks McCarthy is causing President Dwight D. Eisenhower unnecessary trouble, remarking, "This nuisance that is around his (Eisenhower's) neck should be gently taken from it." Miss Furman also briefly discussed the hydrogen bomb and atomic weapons.

A new attendance record was set as 2533 people registered at the Home Economics Spring Weekend Friday and Saturday. Last year's total registration was 1700.

However, it is estimated that nearer 3000 people attended some part of the weekend activities. Approximately 293 people went through the Heart-Saver Kitchen, which was built in a trailer and located outside of Home Economics South.

Crowds Hear Nelson
A capacity crowd listened to George Nelson, one of America's leading designers, speak on "Good Design, What Is It?" Friday afternoon. The featured speaker pointed out that good design is the product of a mature designer, who responds at a high level to any need, whether it be a tool, a chair to sit in, or a need for beauty.

The design, he pointed out, must have a balanced relation to its environment. Such a design is good no matter when it is created.

Schwab Auditorium was again filled on Saturday for the style show, sponsored by the clothing textiles department and directed by Mrs. Lillian M. Larson and Mrs. Edith Viera. Seventeen nursery school children stole the show as they walked, or ran, down the runway which extended down the center of the auditorium. The outfits they modeled were made by girls in the children's construction class.

65 in Style Show
Sixty-five coeds wore cotton blouses, skirts, dresses, suits, and evening gowns they had made. The commentators and ushers wore clothes they had made in one of the five construction courses.

Five guest speakers at the weekend were Miss Lucy Goldwaithe, field editor of McCall's magazine, Miss Edith Brazwell Evans, editor-in-chief of Living for Young Homemakers, Miss Jessie Bakker, household equipment editor of
