

Fire Destroys Farm Areas

A warning was issued yesterday asking students to be careful of fires while on the University farms.

Maurice K. Goddard, head of the Department of Forestry, made the request after a fire, apparently caused by a careless smoker, burned two acres of experimental growth. He said the brush is extremely dry at the present time and a little carelessness could cause severe damage.

The fire yesterday apparently was started accidentally by a lighted match or cigarette, Goddard said, and was extinguished by students studying nearby.

Goddard said a car was seen leaving the fire as it started and Campus Patrol Capt. Philip A. Mark and fire officials are investigating.

The big danger, he said, is the loss of unreplaceable controlled experiment plots.

Caps, Gowns Schedule Set

Seniors who will be graduated in June may order caps and gowns now at the Athletic Store.

The graduation schedule is as follows: engineering and architecture, today and tomorrow; chemistry and physics and physical education, April 21, 22, and 23; liberal arts and business administration, April 26, 27 and 28; and home economics and mineral industries, April 29 and 30, and May 1.

Invitations and announcements may be ordered at the Student Union desk in Old Main according to the same schedule. A deposit of $5 must be made for the cap and gown. Seniors should

'Miss State' Photos Due Tomorrow

All Miss Penn State entrants must turn in a 5 by 7 inch picture by 10 a.m. Wednesday to the Student Union desk in Old Main, according to Marshall Donley, coronation co-chairman. Two groups may jointly enter only one candidate, who will be charged a registration fee of $1, Donley stated.

The name of the entrant, her age, semester, curriculum, activities, home address, and the sponsoring organizations must accompany the picture, he said.

Students who will be graduated in military uniforms need not order caps and gowns.

Separation Plan--

(Continued from page two) into student study rooms. The poll seemed to indicate, however, that students do not favor this proposal. Of the 37 interviewed, 15 favored the proposal, 19 were opposed, and three had no opinions.

Most of those who opposed turning counselor suites over to students for study lounges did not think there was any need for additional study space. Many also thought the lounges would become places to congregate, rather than study.

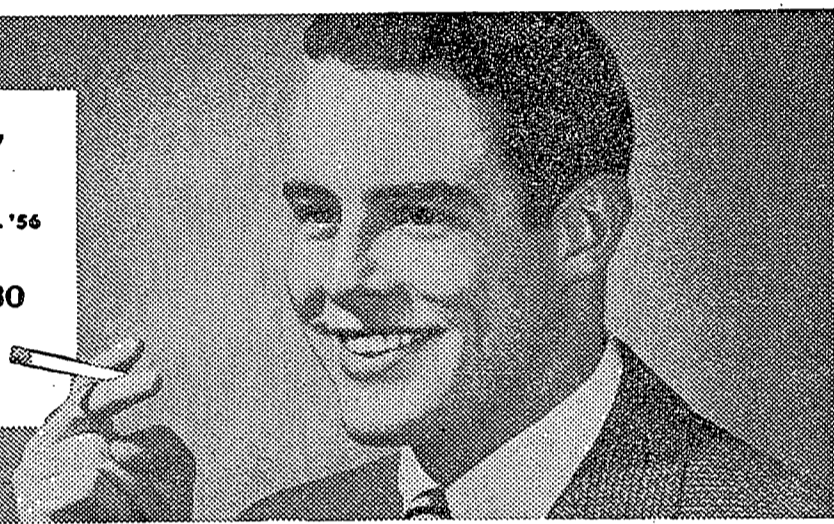

Larry Parsons, second semester chemical engineering major, said the lounges would become places for students to "hang out." He felt the rooms were too small to serve as adequate study halls, and that students could continue studying in their rooms or in the typing rooms which are provided. Those favoring the proposal said since the lounges will not be used by counselors, they could be best used by students as study lounges. Donald Sanders, second semester business administration major, said that since some students did not like to study in their rooms, it would give them a place to work. He also said that because counselors are graduate students, they are seldom in their room, and the space could be better used as study halls.
