Cline explained the project of gathering the names of outstanding freshmen from campus activity groups is being conducted by the sophomore class. He said the class is establishing a point system for the number and variety of activities of freshman men participating in extra-curricular activities.

"It is not a society for membership," Cline said, "but rather an honor roll to recognize those men with outstanding activity records as freshmen."

Former Prof Wins Prize For Poetry

By PADDY BEAHAN

Theodore Roethke, recipient of the 1954 Pulitzer Prize for poetry, was assistant professor of English composition at the University from 1936 to 1946 and tennis coach during that time.

Roethke, now associate professor of English at the University of Washington, Seattle, Monday was awarded the $500 prize for a collection of poems, "The Waking: Poems 1933-1953."

He is considered by William L. Werner, professor of American literature and authority on Penn State authors, as the University's "most famous poet-professor." He is the author of four poetry books.

Roethke received his B.A. and M.A. degrees from the University of Michigan and was connected with public relations at Lafayette College before he came to the University in 1936. He had already published poetry and book reviews in such magazines as "Atlantic Monthly," "Saturday Review of Literature," and "Poetry."

As assistant professor of English Composition at the University, he taught a poetry course and sections of freshman composition. His poetry students included David Wagoner, now instructor in English composition, whose first collection of poetry, "Dry Sun, Dry Wind" appeared last year.

Roethke obtained a leave of absence in 1941 to teach in Bennington College. He returned to the University in 1946 and left for Seattle in 1947. His first book, "Open House," was published in 1941. The original manuscript and galley proofs of this book are now on display in the second floor of the University Library.

He received Guggenheim Foundation fellowships in 1945 and 1950 and a fellowship in 1952 from the Fund for the Advancement of Education. Also in 1952, he was cited for an award by the American Academy of Arts and Letters. He received the Eunics Tietjens prize in poetry in 1947 and the Levinson award of "Poetry" magazine in 1951.
