

7 Men Named Campus Uglies

The seven ugliest men on campus were chosen last night on the basis of the amount of money each collected for the Campus Chest. The winning contestant will be picked from the seven finalists on the basis of effort put forth and will receive an ugly man key. The group who sponsored him will receive a 28-inch high trophy.

In spite of the steady drizzle which apparently failed to dampen the spirits of neither the contestants nor the onlookers, Charles Oberbance, "The Mysterious Traveler," sponsored by Tau Kappa Epsilon and Kappa Kappa Gamma, collected $181.72 to top the list of the seven finalists.

Chi Phi's James Dunlap, who was "Campus Patrolly Yours," collected approximately $104 to be a second finalist. Ronald Lynch sponsored by Phi Sigma Delta, who gave away ugly pills, collected approximately $76 to be third; Phi Kappa Sigma's Ralph Laudenslayer was fourth and collected $73 with impetus from his "Guess the Weight of the Log" contest. The player piano and a climb up the obelisk gave Kenneth White of Theta Chi sponsorship fifth place with $70. Donald Malinak, sponsored by a chain gang of Lambda Chi Alpha and Alpha Chi Omega, was sixth with approximately $70 also, and Scar-faced Robert DiJoseph of Sigma Phi Epsilon was seventh with $63.

The contest turned the Mall-Pollock intersection into a singing fest between classes. Home-made bands, an accordion, and a player piano supplied the music at different times. Root beer was sold at the bulletin board and the chances on the weight of the dog were taken by guessing students at the Corner Room.

Onlookers and contributors under the awning on Pollock Road were constantly being drenched when rain that had settled in the top of the awning was dumped out on unsuspecting students.

The plan proposed by the ugly man committee restricted the time in which the contestants performed skits and other advertising from 12:30 to 1 p.m. and from 5 to 5:30 p.m. This will make it easier for the judges to decide who put forth the most effort, and it also concentrated the time the contestants had to spend on promotion into three hours.

Any group winning the contest three times will be awarded the trophy permanently.

TV Interference Inquiry Postponed

Investigation of interference, believed to be caused by Station WDFM, with area television sets will be postponed until station transponders can be tested with crystal units, according to Eugene M. Fulmer, executive secretary of the State College Chamber of Commerce. Petitions submitted by State College residents called for an investigation to determine causes of the interference. Complaints are still coming in to the Chamber of Commerce. Fulmer said.

Wheee . . .

"IF THE OBELISK won't come to me," said one of the entrants in the Ugly Man contest, "I'll come to it." So, as a publicity stunt, he scaled a ladder and stood atop the Obelisk at 8 a.m. the other morn to impress students rushing to eight o'clocks in an effort to get their penny votes. Man will do 'most anything for a cent these days.

Cabinet OK's $16 Shingle Allocation

All-University Cabinet Thursday night approved the allocation of $16 to purchase shingles for outstanding freshmen men in extra-curricular activities.

The sophomore class, regarding a lack of recognition for outstanding freshmen men, undertook the awarding of shingles as a class project, according to Hugh Cline, class president. No hat societies recognize men before their fourth semester.

Cline said the project committee, headed by Rudolph Lutter, fourth semester arts and letters major, will devise a point system to rate activities. The names of the 15 to 25 outstanding men will be published and shingles will be presented to them, he said.

Cline emphasized that the recognition will be purely in the form of an award and no attempt will be made to form any organization of these men. He said selection will be strictly on the basis of activities with no scholastic requirement.

Terry Stover, National Students Association coordinator, announced that the national NSA convention will be held in August at Iowa State College. Any organization wishing to send delegates to the convention should contact Robert Smoot by Friday. Estimated cost of sending one delegate to the convention is $150 to $175.

Group to Send Two to Camp

Two high school students, one from State College and one from Bellefonte, will be sent to summer camp from July 10-18 by Hat Society Council.

The two students, a girl and a boy, will be chosen by their high school principals on the basis of leadership, scholarship, and personality. The students must also be seniors this coming fall.

The girl to be chosen will go to Keystone Girls State at Shippensburg State Teachers College. The boy will attend Keystone Boys State at Lock Haven State Teachers College.

The primary purpose of the camp project is to teach students the qualities of good leadership. The program is sponsored annually by the State American Legion.

Annual Dairy Show To Be Held Today

The 29th annual Dairy Exposition sponsored by the Dairy Science Club will be held today from 12:30 to 5 p.m. at the livestock pavilion. Preceding the show will be the College of Agriculture's open house scheduled to start about 9 a.m.

The day's activities are expected to bring many visitors to the University, according to John Sink, chairman of the open house.

The open house will conduct tours through classroom buildings, laboratories, and greenhouses. It is designed to demonstrate the facilities of the College of Agriculture. Departments in the College also have prepared displays to further acquaint visitors with the functions of the college, Sink said.

The open house will end about noon to enable visitors to attend the Dairy Exposition.

Over 60 students have entered the exposition. Contestants will show University-owned animals and vie for the title of Grand Champion Showman and Grand Champion Fitter. Champions will also be picked in the individual breeds and classes to be judged.

Animals will be judged on their response to commands and their general fitness and cleanliness.

In addition to the serious competition a coed milking contest will be held at the exposition. The contest will be divided into two sections: one for coeds with no milking experience and one for those with experience.

Presiding over the show and presenting ribbons to the champions will be Judy Smith, chosen last week as the queen of the Dairy Exposition by the Dairy Science Club.

This year's show is being dedicated to A. Leland Beam, director of short courses in agriculture, in recognition of his 37 years of service to the university, according to Darwin Braund, publicity chairman of the exposition.

Beam and Miss Smith will be guests of honor at the Dairy Science Club banquet at 7 tonight at the Lutheran Student Association. The winners of the exposition and last week's dairy cattle judging contest will be presented prizes at the banquet.

Orientation Counselors

New members of Androcles who received Orientation Week counseling agreements should return these as soon as possible to Thomas Kidd, membership chairman, or to one of Androcles present officers.

Student Opinion Favorable To New Grading Proposal

By ANITA OPRENDEK

An indication that students generally approve the proposed grade system change was shown yesterday. Eleven of twelve answers to the question "What is your opinion of the proposed 4-point grading system change?" favored it.

The proposal passed the Honor Society Council Monday and is being considered in the University Senate.

If the grade system of the University is revised, -1 and -2's will be abolished, and a 0 will replace them. The grade 4 will be used as the equivalent of the present 3.

The opinions offered include:

Nancy Cross, second semester Business Administration major: "I think it's a good idea. It'll benefit the students in getting better grades and qualifying them for better jobs when they get out of school. Also, good grades in one subject will not be penalized by poor grades in another."

Herbert Jordan, fourth semester poultry husbandry major: "I'm in favor of it. A -2 hurts too much. Actually I think it is much too rigorous a grading system now. Negligence in one course is too great a penalty. It puts an impediment which shouldn't be there."

Mary Ann Bray, second semester arts and letters major: "I'm in favor of it. It puts Penn State's average on a par with other university averages."

Suzanne Kunkel, second semester arts and letters major: "I approve. It's a good idea because it gives people a better chance."

Byron Crowell, fourth semester forestry major: "I think it would do a lot of good. I've talked to students from other colleges about Penn State's grading system and this is the only school that has a minus grade system where you can lose more than what you can gain. I think the change would be great for the school itself."

Robert Heck, second semester arts and letters major: "I think it's a very good idea. It will eliminate the double penalty for failure. This hurts many students."

Richard Toepel, second semester business administration major: "I think it would be a lot better, because it doesn't punish you as much as a -2 does."

Carl Saperstein, fourth semester pre-law major: "I believe it is an excellent idea. It is something that will improve the fairness of the grading system. It will do away with the unnecessary penalty to students that have already suffered enough in failing a course."

Robert Seigel, eighth semester arts and letters major: "I think it's very good, because if you get a -2 you're really finished. You can make up a -1 but getting a -2 is just like cutting your own throat."

Elayne Nord, fourth semester Home Economics major: "I just transferred from a school that had the 4-0 system and I think it is more satisfactory, compared to the present University system."

Spade Conley, fifth semester liberal arts major: "University of Pennsylvania has a 5 point system, so at least you get some credit for having the initiative to take courses. Presently there are three failing grades at the University. 'Zip' is a failing grade, as a one average is required in order to stay in school."

Donald Phillips, second semester agricultural engineering major: "The only thing I have against the old system right now is that they shouldn't subtract honor points if you don't pass a course."
