

Ed Policy Report Stays in Committee

A report from the Senate committee on educational policy, recommending that the committee on academic standards be relieved of some of its routine administrative duties so it can devote more time to policy concerning academic standards, was referred back to committee Thursday by University Senate.

The report was referred back to committee because senate felt the committee should meet with the committee on academic standards to formulate further opinion on the matter.

Committee Change Recommended
The educational policy committee recommended that the committee on academic standards delegate some of its administrative duties, such as cases of students applying for readmission, to a sub-committee of three persons representing three colleges.

The report recommended the positions on this sub-committee be rotated alphabetically among the colleges, so that one college would not hold the position for more than three years.

Some senate members felt these duties should be handled by a committee in each of the nine colleges. Each committee would consider problems relating to its own students.

In other action, senate approved a report of the committee on admissions, recommending that three units of English be required for admission to the freshman class.

In its report, the committee stated that since most Pennsylvania high schools require three English units for graduation, it should be made a formal admission requirement.

At present, there are no formal English requirements stated in the University Catalogue. The new requirement will become effective when it is printed in the catalogue.

Adopts Rules Report

Senate also adopted a report from the committee on rules, recommending that the Senate Rules for Undergraduate Students be altered to fit the needs of students at University centers.

The committee recommended that a separate handbook be published for students at centers. Changes in the rules would be mostly typographical, such as sub-
