

Coeds to Sign For Intramural Discussions

Coeds interested in the annual intramural discussions for women must register for the contest by Monday night, Dorothy Osterhout, women's debate manager, has announced.

Interested coeds may register with Ellen Ross, 110 Thompson; Ann Leh, 17 Atherton; Agnes Porter, 321 Simmons; or Lois Hummel, 423 McElwain.

The contest, sponsored by Delta Alpha Delta, women's debate honor society, is open to all coeds except members and former members of the women's debate squad. The topic for the discussion is "Would More Religious Education Lead to Higher Morals?"

A trophy will be awarded to the winning speaker.

Sororities or campus groups may sponsor more than one contestant but coeds need not be sponsored to compete.

The elimination rounds will be held Tuesday and the finals Wednesday. No advance preparation is necessary and the contest will be more like a "glorified bull session," according to Miss Osterhout. Each contestant will be allowed to speak three times for a total of six minutes.

$200, 200-Pound Cornerstone Disappears

There was a hole in the wall in the new women's dormitory at Trenton State Teachers College Wednesday night.

A few hours before the hole was discovered college officials had stood by as a cornerstone for the new dorm was cemented into place.

Then it was gone. Roscoe L. West, president of the college, had a suspicion. The possibility that students had swiped the cornerstone, said West, "had not been overlooked." He added "A thorough search along those lines is being conducted."

To replace the 200-pound cornerstone would cost $200.

Today Trenton STC students probably are asking each other, "Whose was that cornerstone I saw you with last night?"

The talks will be given between Feb. 22 and Dec. 31, 1955. February 22 is the actual centennial anniversary date. It was on this date that the University was officially granted a charter.
