Nittany Council Elects Johnson As President

Nittany Council Monday night elected William R. Johnson, second semester chemistry major, president for next year. Other officers elected were Carl Watson, vice president; George Haines, secretary; and Richard Wacht, treasurer.

Council also approved four amendments to the Constitution of the Association of Independent Men. Amendments must be approved by West Dorm Council, Nittany Council, Pollock Council, and Town Council in order to be incorporated into the constitution.

Amendments approved were as follows: (1) compensation shall be awarded to AIM officers; (2) AIM executive board shall be enlarged by the addition of area council presidents; (3) five standing committees shall be established; committees are National Independent Students Association, publications, social, projects, and elections; and (4) AIM president shall appoint chairman and members of the Judicial Board of Review to be approved by Board of Governors and area council presidents respectively.

Student Suspended On Assault Charge

An eighth semester student has been suspended indefinitely for assaulting three dormitory counselors, Frank J. Simes, dean of men, said yesterday.

It was the senior's second offense for assaulting a dormitory counselor. The first offense occurred two years ago.

The incident was provoked in one of the Waring Hall dining rooms, when the student threw food on the floor, and was reprimanded by one of the counselors. The student later assaulted the three counselors outside Waring Hall.

Although not a West Dorm resident, the student had been eating in dormitory dining halls.

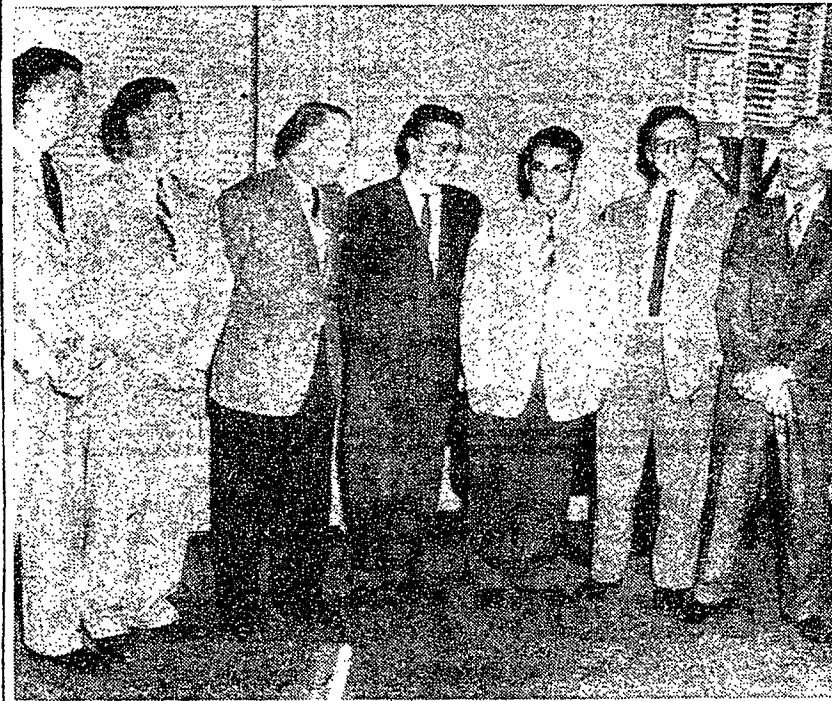

Seniors to Get LaVies Today

Engineering and architecture seniors may pick up their copies of LaVie and vote for the senior class gift today and tomorrow at the Student Union desk in Old Main.

Copies will be available for agriculture seniors Saturday and Monday; for home economics, mineral industries, and education seniors, Tuesday and Wednesday; and for chemistry and physics and physical education seniors, May 27.

About 250 students from the liberal arts and business administration colleges voted on the senior class gift suggestions yesterday.

Scholarship Rewarded

Students May Donate Blood

University students will be accepted as donors when the Johnstown Red Cross bloodmobile unit visits the State College chapter of the American Red Cross on Tuesday, Red Cross officials have announced.

The bloodmobile will be at the American Legion Home, S. Pugh St., between 10 a.m. and 4 p.m. A total of 200 donors has been set as the quota.

Persons may register with members of the JayCees or by calling the Red Cross office, W. Beaver avenue, State College 3162.

Nittany Dormitory Fire Causes $50 Damage

A fire in a Nittany area dormitory Tuesday afternoon caused damage estimated at $50 to the property of Donald Dowden, fourth semester journalism major.

The fire was believed to have originated in a table model radio which Dowden said he had not used for some time. Also damaged were a clock and a typewriter. The fire was discovered by two students passing by the window.

Five Juniors Are Presented Pugh Awards

Five juniors were presented Evan Pugh awards yesterday by Allan R. Davis, secretary of the Honor Society Council, in recognition of outstanding scholastic achievement.

They are William Lyben, chemical engineering major; James Wolfe, business administration major; David Overmier, mechanical engineering major; Bruce Schwalm, agricultural engineering major; and Carl McGrew, aeronautical engineering major.

Each year, five juniors and five seniors are selected for the awards by Honor Society Council on recommendation by the Senate committee on scholarship and awards.

In past years, the awards have been presented at the Honors Day program, but since the program was abolished this year, juniors were given the awards today. Seniors will receive the awards at commencement exercises, June 7.

The awards were established in 1937, in honor of Evan Pugh, first president of the University, from 1859 to 1864. They have been presented every year since then.

The medals are made possible through dues of the 27 members of the Honor Society Council. The awards are identical except that juniors receive silver medals, while senior awards are gold.

New members are Barbara Menaplace, sixth semester education major; Dorothy Osterhout, eighth semester education major; Margaret Troutman, eighth semester education major; Lois Hummel, sixth semester arts and letters major; and Benjamin Sinclair, sixth semester arts and letters major.

Miss Menaplace was elected president of the group. Sinclair is vice president and Miss Hummel, secretary-treasurer.

Members of the honorary must have represented the University in forensic contests.

Each medal bears the name of the winner and the date of presentation.

Opening of Mysterious Chest Reveals Class of '95 Souvenirs

By GAY SNODGRASS

The mystery of Pandora's box, so well-known in Greek mythology, was not solved happily when Pandora loosed all the human ills on the world as she lifted the lid; but the mystery of another box, a hand-carved chest in Pattee Library, has been solved without mishap.

The chest, carved by a member of the class of 1895 of the Pennsylvania State College, may be opened only by a member of the class of '95. The contents of the mysterious chest were revealed Tuesday when George B. Snyder, class secretary and a resident of State College, opened the wooden box containing class mementos, old publications, and pictures of the campus and class personalities.

The chest was carved by Ralph Fitch Martin in commemoration of the class's 40th anniversary and 1935 reunion. The intricately carved chest is covered with the names of the 36 members of the class; as each member dies, a cross is carved after his name.

The first verse of the class hymn is carved on the lid of the chest. The tune of the hymn was used by Fred Lewis Pattee when he wrote the words of our present alma mater.

Among the articles in the chest are autographed parasols in class colors of pink and olive green used at the 1935 reunion, and a fragment of the flag the class as freshmen had to fly for 24 hours while the sophomores tried to tear it down.

An interesting, if somewhat humorous, picture of life at Penn State in 1895 is presented by the LaVies published in 1890, when the first one was put out by the junior class, to 1896; college catalogues; and Free Lances, monthly student publications reporting the news of last month, and the predecessor of the Daily Collegian. Photographs of a rural campus, coeds with long dresses and high-button shoes, and presidents and faculty members buildings, are all in the chest.

Snyder was the first secretary of the class and was elected to that post again when the class was reorganized four years ago. He came to live in State College after retiring 12 years ago from a teaching position in the Pittsburgh public schools.

The class of 1895 is planning its 60th anniversary reunion next year. With 36 members, it was the largest class to graduate from Penn State up to 1895. The class founded the Centennial Student Aid Fund to help needy students at the University, and its funds now total about $2000.

The chest is on exhibit in the newly opened exhibit room on the fourth floor of Pattee Library. This room is an extension of the Penn State Room, which is now used as a reference room for the University's history.

According to Mrs. Thomas I. Maiers, Penn State Room librarian, the library is hoping to expand the exhibit room into a museum of Penn State's history and tradition.
