AIM Judicial Group To Be Announced

The Association of Independent Men Judicial Board of Review committee will announce the new members of the board and will give a partial evaluation of this year's system in permitting candidates without previous experience before the AIM Board of Governors. The meeting will be at 7:30 p.m. tonight in 102 Willard.

Eng Council Purchases Equipment

The Engineering Student Council recently purchased six pieces of equipment, new and used, costing $562. Three Monroe calculators, two spectrometers, and one contact printer will be placed in a room in which engineering undergraduates may do computation work.

Barry Mills, council equipment chairman, said as yet a room had not been chosen for the new equipment. He said the council would purchase additional machines when it had more money.

A meeting of incoming council members, presided over by George Kulynych, council president, elected four student officers and a faculty adviser.

They are David Shoop, vice president; George Yingling, treasurer; Joyce Cox, corresponding secretary; William Jackson, recording secretary; and Professor Lawrence Perez, faculty adviser.

The council voted to give $70 to the architects to be used for the completion of their lounge in Main Engineering.

Mills, chairman of the publications committee, and his committee will work in the summer on a newsletter which will be sent to new students in the engineering school in September.

The council members were urged to be present at the Orientation Week meeting to be held on September 14.

Harry Nichol, sixth semester agronomy major, has been named editor of the Penn State Farmer for next year.

Also elected were David Morrow, managing editor; Louis Gallicker, business manager; Robert Brown, circulation manager; Judith Corfield, editorial layout; John Robinson, feature editor; Eleanor Cober, local advertising manager.

The positions of advertising manager, state advertising manager, and advertising layout manager have not been filled.

Donald White, retiring editor, announced the Farmer will be open to all students regardless of the college they are enrolled in next year.

The AIM Judicial Board of Review committee interviewed applicants for the eight positions on the board last Sunday. Twenty-five men applied for what was one of the first opportunities for students to get into student judicial work without previous experience.

The board reviews disciplinary cases dealing with independent men, and offers suggestions to the Dean of Men's office.

The motion concerning the amending procedure would change the system so that a proposed amendment would be passed by a simple majority. Then it would be approved by three of the four area councils before becoming official.

McCarthy Labels Charts Dishonest

WASHINGTON, (AP) — Senator Joseph R. McCarthy (R-Wis) has blasted as "dishonest" Army-prepared charts showing the number of times Private David Schine was absent from duty compared with time off for the average trainee. McCarthy called it a "deceptive, phony chart."

Army witnesses defended the charts. And the Fort Dix, N.J., commander—Major General Cornelius Ryan—said, "I do not think anything put out by the Army is dishonest."

The Schine chart contained black squares denoting the private's passes. The lettering indicated that Schine got 16 passes, and was away from Fort Dix on all or part of 43 days during the period.

The other chart had white squares with black lines in them, indicating most of Schine's fellow

Lyon Blasts 'Paw' For Mudslinging

Letter on page four

John Lyon, State Party vice clique chairman, yesterday charged that Lion's Paw "dragged through the gutter" and sought "in every conceivable manner" to beat the winning candidate in this spring's All-University elections.

"It is rather ironic," Lyon said, that "the very man whom Lion's Paw tried so hard to beat is a member of 'this esteemed and honorable' organization."

Lyon made his statements in a letter and statement to a Daily Collegian reporter.

Lyon said the old Lion's Paw members had "groomed" Robert Smoot, sixth semester chemical engineering major and a new member of Lion's Paw, as its candidate for All-University president for "a long time." He said Smoot had been groomed for the job since his freshman year and had received "choice appointments."

Lyon said after Smoot did not get the Lion Party nomination, a representative of Lion's Paw contacted State Party and "in a midnight meeting was pressured to knife in the back State Party's nominee for All-University president (Lewis Wade, secretary of the Mineral Industries Student Council) by substituting the 'more popular one'."

Wade Withdrew

In a statement to the Daily Collegian March 18 Wade said he had declined to withdraw as a candidate for All-University president in favor of Smoot. However, he refuted his first statement that night. Wade said he had been under considerable pressure from factions in both the State and Lion parties to withdraw.

Wade's resignation and later withdrawal of his resignation occurred the same day as the "Clean-Up Campus Politics" meeting, chaired by Donald Herbein, in the name of the senior men's hat societies.

Lyon said the meeting was arranged by "Lion's Paw and its stooges to nominate a groomed candidate (Smoot) and smear the Lion Party's choice (Jesse Arnelle, All-University President) while he and others were out of town."

At the time, Arnelle was traveling with the basketball team, taking part in the National Collegiate Athletic Association tournament.

Organizers Named

Lyon named Charles Gibbs, eighth semester arts and letters major; James Dunlap, eighth semester arts and letters major; and Herbein, eighth semester arts and letters major, as the men who had arranged for the meeting. None of these three were members of Lion's Paw.

The "clean-up" meeting died when the tide of student feeling at the meeting turned against the sponsors and Wade's resignation failed to materialize.

Lyon said the Lion's Paw representative had contacted John Fink, State Party clique chairman. Lyon said Fink told the party executive committee about his meeting with the Lion's Paw man but would not reveal the name of the person who had contacted him.

Fink Denies

Fink yesterday denied he had been contacted by a member of Lion's Paw in regard to Wade's resignation. He said, however, that once Wade had decided to resign, "several persons" spoke to him "about the possibilities of having Smoot run."

Lyon said Lion's Paw tapped Arnelle to "influence the vast amount of political appointments (160) made by the All-University president, without which Lion's Paw has no power. They didn't want the man, but they had to tap the office."

"It is indeed ironic to see that no matter which party wins the election, it is really only Lion's Paw that wins. The students don't have a chance, only they don't know it," Lyon said.

Grant Presented For Driver Work

The University was presented a grant of $5000 by the Allstate Insurance Company, to be used in promoting the work in driver training education.

Marion R. Trabue, dean of the College of Education and director of summer sessions, who received the check at a luncheon Friday, said the funds will be used to provide scholarships for teachers enrolling in the program at the summer sessions. Priority will be given to teachers in schools about to inaugurate work in driver training, while teachers now working in this field will have second priority.
