

Ag Groups Represented By 45 Council Members

The Agricultural Student Council is composed of official representatives from each departmental student organization in the College of Agriculture plus representatives from the 4-H club and Penn State Grange.

The number of council representatives each departmental organization receives is in proportion to the number of students in that department. However, the number of representatives can not exceed 45. A council member must have an All-University average of 1.0 or better.

Many Purposes

The purpose of the council as outlined in Article III, Section 1 of the council's constitution is "to unite the various organizations and departments in the college of agriculture into one operating entity; to promote the welfare of physical conditions in the College of Agriculture; to establish, foster, and develop a spirit of unity, friendship, and sociability among the students and faculty members of the University particularly in the College of Agriculture; to create in the students a spirit of pride in and zeal for agriculture; to maintain and ever promote high standards of scholarship and character among the students within the classroom and in extra-curricular activities."

The council sponsors numerous activities throughout the year. Howdy Night, the annual Ag College fall get-together will be held Sept. 30. This is a mixer which enables freshmen and upperclassmen to get acquainted with each other and with the staffs of the University and College.

Ag Hill Leadership Training Night will be held October 6.

It will consist of a dinner meeting of all student organizations' officers, the subject of which is to better inform these officers, as to their duties and how to perform them in the most effective manner.

The Ag Hill party is a University-wide function consisting of dinner, game-playing, and dancing. It will be held this year in Recreation Hall November 13. Last year 1400 students and faculty members attended this annual fall fling.

Coffee Hour

The Ag Hill coffee hour is an annual meeting between students and faculty members. It is usually held early in December but no definite date has been set as yet.

The Ag Hill Speaking Contest will be held early in February and is open to all students in the College. Also in February will be the annual Achievement Day. This is a day set aside to honor student leaders in the College of Agriculture. It includes an evening program at which awards will be presented.

Council meetings are held regularly at 7 p.m. every second and fourth Tuesday of each month in 105 Agriculture.

George Williams, council president, has extended this invitation to all students: "I would like to invite both new and old students to attend the meetings of council at any time. After all, it is the student governing body of Ag Hill and thus its works affects you as a student in the College. This is your opportunity to see just how your representatives are doing their job and if they are doing it to your satisfaction."

the four Big Weekend dances—Junior Prom, Military Ball, IFC-Panhel Ball, and the Senior Prom—University dances will be held in this ballroom. Other long-awaited facilities are provided by the $2.75 million structure. Among these are a lecture hall seating approximately 200 people, a large banquet room, two dining rooms and a cafeteria, two lounges, a browsing library, and a music room containing a grand piano and surrounded by seven smaller listening rooms.

A game room which has sufficient room for 16 ping pong tables, card tables, and a shuffleboard area should prove very popular with the student body.

Ever since construction of the building began on Holmes Field, prospective users have followed its progress. Besides serving its function as the headquarters of student life, the HUB will provide faculty and administration mem-
