

BA Council Is Youngest At University

The major student organization of the College of Business Administration is the Business Administration Student Council.

The council strives to establish better student-faculty relationships, to promote the College of Business Administration on campus through higher moral and scholastic standards, to make recommendations to the curricula being offered in the college, to co-operate with other student councils on the many phases of campus activities through the means of the Inter College Council Board, and to provide for matters pertaining to the welfare of students within the College.

In its first year of operation from 1953-54 the council sponsored a number of student activities. Last fall the council held a student-faculty mixer at the Temporary Union Building and worked with the University to promote Career Day. In the spring, the councils held two coffee hours.

Michael Doyle edited the College newspaper, the BusAd Bulletin, through its first year of publication. A council committee is now studying the possibility of a college magazine to be edited by students of the College.

Council President Richard Favro Tuesday will address the new students in the College on student participation in government and council work.

Council officers for this year are: Favro, president; James Ginsberg, vice president; and Kaye Buterbaugh, secretary-treasurer. Freshmen members will be elected this fall.

The possibility of formulating a society for the promotion of the College through various techniques and activities as well as high scholastic attainment is being considered.

Yes Children, It Will Rain At Penn State

The weather at Penn State is a great topic of conversation. It is different from that anywhere else in the world.

There are two things about the weather that a student may be sure of. First, it will rain or snow on every big weekend. Second, there will be a monsoon season somewhere between the middle of March and the middle of May.

Last year, for instance, there were 18 inches of snow Junior Prom weekend. The football game was played nevertheless. Penn State students never learn to like the weather but many of them learn to live through it. In 1953 it even snowed on Spring weekend.

The monsoon season is another weather idiosyncrasy of Penn State. For over a month each year it rains almost every day. If it stops, it stops during the class hour and starts again during the ten-minute break between classes.

When the rains finally begin to let up the students' thoughts turn to Whipple's Dam with its beach and swimming facilities. They plan weekend picnics and late afternoon excursions. The sun shines warm and bright while they are in class, but as they run for their transportation, the clouds empty again.

One can also be fairly certain that in the winter one or two days before vacation starts there will be an ice and snow storm.

A final certainty about Penn State weather is that during examination week it will be absolutely gorgeous.

Independents --

(Continued from page nine) for independent organizations that would be fair to all schools of varying enrollment. The completed project will be reported to this year's convention in the spring.

8 Volunteers Serve on AIM Judicial Board

This year's Association of Independent Men Judicial Board of Review will be unique in at least one way. It will be the first important student judicial board to be selected from applicants instead of by appointment.

An evaluation of this new system has been studied over the summer. On the basis of this evaluation AIM will decide whether to continue the plan in the future. Previously the eight members of the board and the chairman were appointed by the AIM president. But this year only the chairman, Edward Stoops, was appointed.

The judicial board handles all cases involving independent men except those having relations with groups outside the University and would have a bearing on the University's name. Its decisions are turned into the Dean of Men's office in the form of a recommendation. Only twice in the past two years has the Dean of Men's office refused to accept the board's recommendations.

Most of the cases the board handles are concerned with drinking and damage in the dormitory units. Most of the punishment has usually been office probations, but this year chairman Stoops hopes for a "wider variety of discipline areas."

The board will generally meet once every other week. Stoops hopes to get it ready to handle cases by the first week of school.

Last year, he said, the board wasn't ready for work until December.

Frosh Dinks --

(Continued from page three) classmen or women. Veterans will be exempted regardless of age. Falsification to avoid customs will be considered a violation of the customs code.

Freshmen will not be subject to hazing by upperclass men or women. Hazing is defined as any activity not specifically prescribed by Freshman Customs Board.

EPISCOPAL FRESHMEN

Welcome to Penn State and to

ST. ANDREW'S PARISH

316 S. Frazier St.

HELLO FRESHMEN

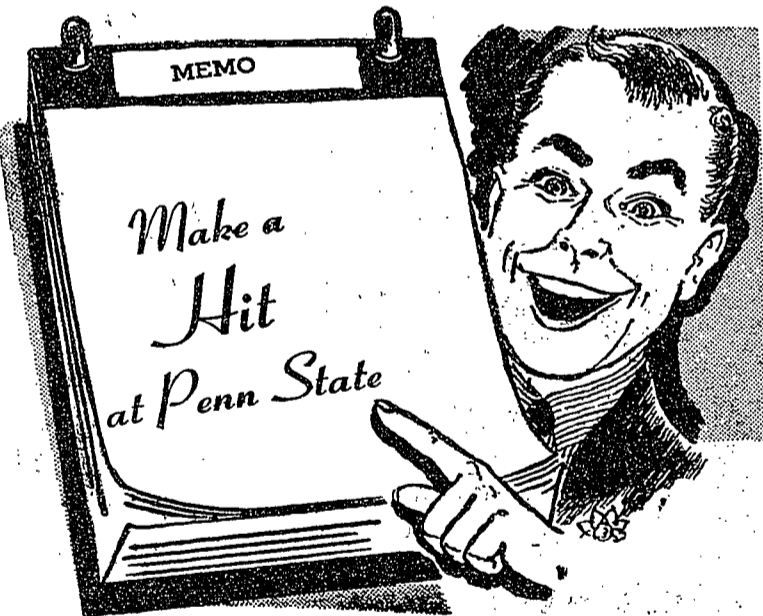

And a Cheery Howdy-Do
to All of You!

Can you imagine this is the fifty-eighth freshman class that we have seen enter the university, and among the thousands that have entered since, Grahams can account for many that have been friends of theirs. We trust that we may continue to count you all as friends. Get acquainted with "the bench."

GRAHAM'S 103 S. ALLEN ST.

FRESHMEN

GET YOUR

PENN STATE JACKET

in wools, poplins
or duck cloths

"It's a custom in campus-wear"

from

Hur's MEN'S SHOP

114 E. College Ave.

FROSH!

Buy and Sell Your Books
At the UBA in the TUB

- Self-Service
- Lowest Prices in Town
- No Waiting in Lines

- Your Headquarters for Official Customs

- FREE NAME CARDS

Opening Monday, Sept. 13

Mon. and Tues. 9 a.m. to 5 p.m. Remainder of week 9 a.m. to 9 p.m.

Penn State Book Exchange

Student-Operated Non-Profit Book Store