

Elections Code Change Asked

(This is the third in a series of articles dealing with this year's student encampment.)

The political structure of University student government will be changed if All-University Cabinet approves the revised elections code tonight. The code was set up by the encampment committee on "Elections and Nominations."

One of the major changes in the code as set up by the encampment stipulates that the All-University clique chairmen shall be elected by the entire clique. This is in contrast with present policies of the State and Lion parties.

The Lions Party clique chairman is elected by the party's steering committee, as does the State Party's student representative council, which is similar to the Lion Party's steering committee.

Another major change in the proposed elections code states that the adoption of the code combined with the presentation to the cabinet of copies of existing clique constitutions as amended and extended shall be regarded as a formal recognition and chartering of campus political parties as organized student groups at the University.

Previously, campus political parties were not officially recognized as organized student groups. This will bring the parties under closer control of cabinet.

Voting times remained unchanged in the proposed code. The recommended code however, left the dates for elections to be set by the All-University Elections Committee. The code now in effect specifies dates and must be altered for each election.

Two new locations for voting were set up in the proposed elections code. Along with the second floor of Old Main, the lounge of Hamilton Hall and Nittany Dorm 20 were also proposed.

The proposed elections code was one of the most controversial issues discussed by the encampment. The purpose of the new code is to establish a permanent procedure for campus elections. Previously, the elections code had to be revised before every election.

IFC Sets Workshop Schedule

The Interfraternity Workshops will be held October 19 and the Workshop Banquet October 21, John Carpenter, Interfraternity president, announced last night.

The meetings will be held at the houses to which the IFC officers, who will be chairmen of each committee, belong.

Exchange Dinners

Plans for exchange dinners to be held during the workshops have been arranged and members will be notified of the plans later. The workshop banquet will be held at the Nittany Lion Inn.

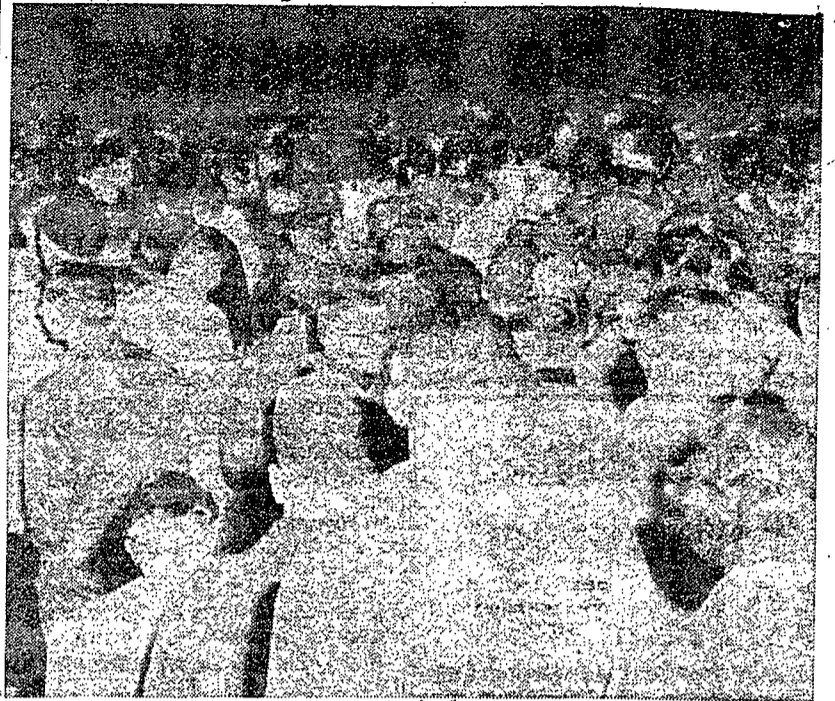

Oct. 24 is the date of the first fraternity open house to be held this semester, John Russell, IFC rushing chairman announced. The fraternity movie will be shown on Oct. 19 and 20, Russell said, and IFC rushing booklets and preference cards will be distributed to freshmen Oct. 21.

The theme for homecoming and the basis of judging fraternity displays will be announced Oct. 7, Robert Kitchell, IFC vice-president, announced. Kitchell also urged fraternities to start getting materials for displays now.

Fraternities were urged to participate in the IFC safety program during semester holidays by Walter Loman, IFC safety committee chairman. He reported that no thefts were reported over the summer in houses which participated in the safety program.

O. Edward Pollock, assistant dean of men for fraternity affairs, asked fraternities to continue to cooperate with the administration as they have thus far this semester. He also urged cooperation with IFC officers and committee heads so to strengthen the work of IFC.

2500 Turn Out for Brief Pre-Illinois Game Rally

By PADDY BEAHAN

An estimated crowd of 2500 students, probably one of the largest in recent years, turned out last night to send off the football team and was sent off itself after an abbreviated pep rally of about 20 minutes.

The crowd, which flowed out into the road in front of Recreation Hall entrance and down the street, dispersed uncertainly after a short program when an interview with Co-captains Donald Balthaser and James Garrity failed to materialize.

Master of Ceremonies Alec Beliasov, seventh semester agriculture economics major, informed the crowd after a series of cheers, songs, and a short skit that because the team had just finished last minute drills for the game Saturday, the co-captains were still in the shower, and couldn't appear.

After a final cheer, led by Bruce Coble and the rest of the squad, and the "Alma Mater" the crowd stood around uncertainly before realizing that the rally was finished. Latecomers from Nittany and Pollock arrived just in time to leave.

Beliasov was assisted in his skit by the "Professor," who, under the fur coat, was Louis Fryman, fourth semester business administration major. The cheerleaders put the crowd through several cheers before Beliasov took over the mike. The Blue Band, directed by James Dunlop, also played several selections.

Dinks predominated in the large crowd but upperclasses were also well represented. The crowd dispersed in orderly fashion without much grumbling except by a few upperclassmen.

The pep rally was sponsored by the Hat Society Council. Hatmen and hatwomen entered dormitories before the rally to round up

University 4th In Animal Show

Penn State was awarded fourth place yesterday at the Eastern State Exposition at Springfield, Mass. with the winning of three grand championships by University animals this week.

A Hereford steer, "Penn State's Larry" won in its class and went on to be judged champion Hereford steer of the show. Then "Bardolliermere 40th," a purebred Aberdeen-Angus bull, won its class, won Senior champion ribbons, and was finally declared grand champion Angus bull of the show.

Third grand champion was an Angus heifer who, after winning her class and senior champion laurels, won in the Angus female division.

Only 16 out of 500 points separated the University from the University of Massachusetts, first place winners. Second and third place winners were Ohio State University and Cornell University.

Two other Angus females from the University also placed second in their respective classes. Gail Long, herdsman, showed the beef cattle.

The football team will leave late this afternoon for Champaign, Ill.

Riva Stresses Need for Military

Col. Daniel F. Riva, who succeeded Lt. Col. Jack W. Dieterle as professor of air science and tactics at the University, Tuesday addressed 1078 freshmen enrolled in the Air ROTC program.

The former administrative Secretary of Defense, asked the students to stop and consider what freedom really means.

"Traditionally, we have never been a military nation," he said. "However, to preserve our Nation in this strange twilight between peace and war, and to keep our precious freedom, our leaders have come to the inevitable conclusion that a large and strong military force is absolutely necessary."

Riva said that it was recognized this is a very expensive way to preserve peace, expensive if measured in terms of money, but very cheap if measured in terms of human lives.

Surrender is an idea unknown to us, Riva said. The alternative, he said, is to maintain a strength so obvious to a potential enemy that he dare not attack us for fear that devastating retaliation would be brought upon his own country.

A native of East Hartford, Conn., Riva was graduated from Springfield College, Mass. He has completed work toward his master of arts degree in governmental administration at George Washington University.

A senior pilot, Riva served in England during World War II. In 1947-48, he was stationed in Germany with the Berlin Airlift. He later was assigned to intelligence work with the U.S. Advisory Group to Greece.

Riva has been awarded the Distinguished Flying Cross with cluster; The Air Medal with two clusters; Commendation ribbon; and the Presidential Unit citation.

Lt. Col. Dieterle came to Penn State in 1950. He will leave next month for assignment to the 50th

Air Force in Korea.

Four officers, recently returned from overseas duty, have been added to the staff of the Department of Air Science and Tactics at the University, Riva said yesterday.

They are Major Charles A. Swain, who served in Germany; Capt. Warren R. Aiken, returned from Alaska; Capt. William R. Seal, from Korea; and 1st Lt. Salvatore J. Marasciullo, who served in the Philippines and Korea.
