

Chimes to Sell Suckers at Game

By ANN LEH

Penn Staters will be set to "lick Virginia" today, both on and off the field. For while Coach Rip Engle's men take care of field techniques, Chimes, junior women's hat society, will be in charge of "licking Virginia" off the gridiron.

"Lick Virginia" suckers, Chimes' current fund raising project, will go on sale tomorrow morning on campus, and will be on sale at game time, outside the Beaver Field gates.

'Turn-About' Dance Set For Tonight

Dungarees, "ragamuffin" shirts, balloons, and gala streamers will be the setting for Cwens' annual Dungaree Drag, scheduled from 9 p.m. to midnight tonight in Recreation Hall.

Sports-clad couples attending the dance will find themselves engulfed in an enormous clothesline, draped with blue-jeans and plaid shirts and stretched across the width of the gymnasium. Adding color to the denim trousers display will be strings of balloons hung around the sides of the dance floor.

The "Drag" offers students two unique features: turn-about invitations and flowerless corsages. Women students issue invitations to the girl-ask-boy event, escort their dates to Rec Hall, and in general play the role of Penn State Sadie Hawkins.

Flowerless corsages are the vogue for the evening. Three prizes will be given at intermission from 10:30 to 11 p.m., for the most original, artistic, and largest adornment. Last year's "shoulder arrangements" were composed of such oddities as vegetables, lollipops, tissue paper, sponges, and chicken wire. Corsages will be judged by a committee of Cwens members and their dates.

Music for the dance will be by the "Dream Spinners," featuring Frances Spatafore, third semester language major, as vocalist. Miss Spatafore is noted at the University as winner of the Freshman Talent Show last year and for her vocal performances with Jack Huber's orchestra.

Tickets for the dance, priced at $2 a couple, may be purchased from members of Cwens or at the entrance to Recreation Hall tonight. Costume for the event is sportsclothes or slacks.

The Dungaree Drag is the largest project undertaken each year by the sophomore women's hat society. Proceeds from the dance will go toward the Cwens' scholarship fund to be given to eligible sophomore women sometime during the spring semester.
