

Lion Harriers To Meet Cornell

Penn State's cross-country team will tangle with Cornell today at Ithaca, N.Y., in an effort to pick up its first victory of the season.

Jim McKelvey will captain the Lions against the Big Red.

Coach Chick Werner's harriers are faced with the threat of losing two meets in one year for the first time since 1943. Navy and Villanova tripped the Lions last weekend at Annapolis in the opening meet of the season. That loss ended Penn State's six-meet winning streak which dated back to 1952.

This will be the first time that the Lions have run on Cornell's new 4.7 mile course.

Ray Osterhout of Syracuse set the course record of 26:16.6 earlier this year.

Cornell started the season with a 15-44 win over Colgate last Saturday at Ithaca. Don Farley finished first in the Colgate meet with a 28:08 clocking. Cornell's No. 2 runner, John Rosenbaum, finished in a three-way tie for second with a time of 28:47.

Penn State's top runner is Doug Moorhead. The Nittany junior placed first at Annapolis with a 21:16 time for Navy's hilly four-mile layout. Jim Pastorius, Ted Garrett, Don Mowry, and McKelvey are other Lion standouts who will be running today.

John Chillrud, Don Woodrow, Paul Roberts, Dick Mohler, Bruce Austin, and Dave Nash round out the Penn State team. Werner's runners possess a lot of potential and any one of them could finish near the top. With an extra week of practice the Lions are in much better shape than they were for the triangular meet with Navy and Villanova. Going into that meet the Lions had only a little more than two weeks of work-outs.

Last year Penn State outlegged Cornell at home, 19-39, with Moorhead finishing in a three-way tie for first.

Norm Gordon, freshman cross-country coach, will send his harriers against Cornell's yearlings in a 2.7 mile run.

Cornell's yearlings swamped the Colgate freshmen, 15-50, in their first met. Midler, Eckel, and Lyle tied for first with 16:35 times.

Texas Given Edge Over Oklahoma

By Associated Press

Oklahoma and Texas, two of most potent football teams in the southwest, if not in the entire nation, meet today in the 49th game of an old and colorful series. And the result could leave the national rankings as thoroughly scrambled as Oklahoma's lineup has been since Gene Calame got hurt.

Oklahoma was awarded the No. 1 spot on the national list this week by the sports writers and broadcasters voting in the Associated Press ranking poll after Notre Dame, the former leader, took a tumble. Texas, in spite of a loss to Notre Dame, collected enough points for 15th place.

Calame, a clever, experienced quarterback, suffered a cracked collar bone in Oklahoma's game against Texas Christian two weeks ago. That could be called a Calame-ity. The Sooners never have lost a game. Calame started at quarterback, and his replacement, a 164-pound sophomore, Jimmy Harris, isn't his equal at faking, ball handling, and reading the enemy defenses.

As a result of all this and of the strength of the Texas line, the odds-makers have disregarded the ratings and installed Texas as a slight favorite.

Wisconsin-Rice is the nationally televised game of the week and, for once, the screen watchers can't complain that they were short-changed by the selection. They're third, and 11th in the AP ratings, respectively, and offer a feud between two of the season's best-publicized backs, explosive Dicky Moegle of Rice, and Wisconsin's crashing Alan Ameche.

Purdue-Duke brings together the fifth and sixth teams in the AP poll. It was Stu Holcomb's Boilermakers and sophomore passer Len Dawson who deflated Notre Dame last week. Today, Duke, with four able flingers in its starting backfield and one of the nation's best pass deefners records, is primed to do a little deflating.

ended with the Mustangs leading. The second half was scoreless with the Mustangs threatening often but not being able to score.

Four Wins Posted In IM Football Play

By FRAN FANUCCI

For the first time this year the independents took the spotlight and the fraternities the backseat as three independents posted victories in intramural football played last night at Beaver Field.

In the games played Iron Men defeated the Kilowatts 22-0, the 4F's beat Unit 7 7-6, and in the only fraternity action of the night Alpha Chi Rho edged by Phi Kappa 7-6, and the Mustangs beat the Marvels 6-0.

In the first game a well-organized Iron Men squad, led by "interception-minded" Dick Baxter, romped to their victory over the Kilowatts. Baxter intercepted four passes to set up two of the three touchdowns scored. The first TD came when the Iron Men recovered a fumble on the Kilowatts' nine yard line, and a few plays later Fred Jones ran for the score. The try for the extra point was no good.

The second touchdown came on a pass from Chris Duliakas to Fred Jones, who caught it in between two men in the end zone. With only 22 seconds left in the game Iron Men scored again when John Grundon ran 60 yards.

The second game of the night was a thriller right through to the finish as the 4F's out-scored their opponents in first downs 2-1 to win. The 4F's started the scoring when with only three minutes gone in the game, a Norm Yunits to Frank Price pass play covering 20 yards was good for the TD. The extra point try failed.

Unit 7 Scores

In the second half the boys from Unit 7 came to life, and on a series of plays, following an interception by Terry Alwine, they scored when Joe Caupano threw to Vince Caracci for the score.

The contest see-sawed back and forth until the final minutes. Then a pass from Caupano to Caracci was good for a first down and the game.

In the third contest Alpha Chi

Rho and Phi Kappa tangled heads in a game full of spectacular plays. For the whole first half the teams battled to gain ground, but the alert defense of both of them failed to give an inch. Steve Frank, of Alpha Chi Rho, was a thorn in the side of Phi Kappa during the whole encounter, along with Jack Metzger who proved to be just as bad against Alpha Chi Rho.

Sensational Score

After a scoreless first half Ken William, of Alpha Chi Rho, caught Newk Grub in the end zone for the initial score of the game. But not to be denied, Phi Kappa fought back and on the kickoff, Bob Misko, standing on his own 15 yard line threw to Jim Ross and Ross scampered the rest of the distance for the score.

But when the final gun sounded Alpha Chi Rho was ahead in first downs and thus won the ball game.

In the last game the Mustangs started fast when on a recovered fumble they took possession of the ball on the Marvel 20 yard line. Then 3 plays later a Carol Henson pass to Harry West was good for the TD. The extra point try was no good. The first half

SATURDAY MORNING QUARTERBACK

The Penn State-Virginia football series has a very short, but interesting history. The two teams have played only one previous game and that one ended rather abruptly late in the third period after players, fans, and coaches mixed it up in the middle of the playing field.

The contest took place in October of 1893—not too many years after the University entered the sport on an intercollegiate level. The University of Virginia student newspaper, "College Topics," described it this way:

"... the game can only be described with great difficulty. One fact stands out clear and distinct, however. The slugging was simply terrific on both sides, and the game came to an abrupt and sudden termination soon after the second half had begun partly in consequence thereof.

"It was really a disgraceful scene and a hard blow to the honor of our University that a visiting team should be treated in such a manner... the whole affair is to be deeply deplored and the only redeeming feature was the action of giving Penn State not only the game but also a most humble and sincere apology... We cannot blame captain Brown for refusing to continue the game..."

In those days there were no seating stands for spectators and when the trouble broke out on the playing field, everybody joined in. Well, the Virginia "rivalry" was discontinued after that year and today the two schools play again after a 61-year lapse.

This one today by all odds should be the easiest of the first three for the Lions. Virginia hasn't shown anything exceptional in its first two games, although it won them both.

The Lions, on the other hand, have held the winning hand against two fine football teams utilizing power, speed, balance, and depth in both games. Rip Engle's line continues to improve and his backfield alignment (he has eight men of first class ability) is as good or better than any in the east.

However, they can't let up for a minute. There isn't a team on the remainder of the schedule that isn't capable of throwing a hard punch some Saturday afternoon, and that most certainly includes Virginia. The Cavalier line is big and the backs are fast and threatening.

Virginia could be a sleeper, although it doesn't seem likely. The Lions are taking them as they come and this one looks like it should come without too much trouble.

From here it looks like Penn State by four touchdowns.

Ex-Chaplain Dies in Conn.

The Rev. Dr. Frazer Metzger, who served from 1923 until 1925 as chaplain at Penn State, died early this summer at South Windsor, Conn., at the age of 81.

Dr. Metzger, a native of Gloversville, N.Y., attracted wide attention 50 years ago when he successfully urged the merger of the Christian Church and the Congregational Church in Randolph, Vt.

Prior to his appointment, Dr. Metzger campaigned with President Theodore Roosevelt in 1912 as a Progressive party candidate for Governor of Vermont. He was defeated in the election, but in 1917 was elected to the Vermont legislature.

Dr. Metzger went from Penn State to Rutgers University where he was dean of men until 1945, when he became pastor of the First Congregational Church at South Windsor. He served in this capacity until his death.

Penn State and the University of Virginia, football opponents in 1954, last met on the gridiron in 1893.
