

Asks 'Institutional Climate'

Senate Group Wants Change

The Senate subcommittee on general education recommended to University Senate Thursday that the University establish an "institutional climate" to encourage students to develop an awareness of moral and ethical values and a positive philosophy that provides a balance between personal and community welfare.

Favro Appoints Biz-Ad Bulletin Editorial Staff

Business Administration Council president Richard Favro has appointed Michael Doyle, seventh semester business administration major, editor of the Biz-Ad Bulletin, and Max Frohwein, also a seventh semester business administration major, assistant editor.

Two other committees were appointed. Gordon Pogal is chairman of the student-faculty relations committee, while Adolph Seidensticker, Leroy Harris and Edward Cramer will serve on the elections committee.

The Business Administration College will hold its annual Career Day on Nov. 4. Business classes will be canceled that afternoon for students to attend discussion groups in various business fields, said Kaye Buterbaugh, council secretary.

The council's constitution has been amended so that seven business organizations on campus will have permanent seats on the council.

Harris Places In Dairy Show

John Harris, seventh semester agricultural education major, was the second highest individual scorer in dairy cattle judging at the National Dairy Congress at Waterloo, Iowa.

The Penn State team tied for fourth place in close competition with more than 30 teams in the United States, and was the leading team in the East.

Team members were Harris, Jacob Guffey, seventh semester dairy husbandry; Fred Seipt, fifth semester dairy husbandry; and Walter Wurster, sixth semester dairy husbandry.

Gilbert H. Porter, instructor of dairy science, coached the team. Clyde N. Hall, supervisor of the Dairy Production Center at the University farms, accompanied the team.

The team will participate in intercollegiate competition at the Chicago International Dairy Show today.

they have "extra-curricular" drilling, but they also have been active in campus social life.

The Military Ball last year ran smoothly under the direction of Pershing Riflemen. They sponsored pledge dances and banquets as well. The drill team also participates in the Regimental Drill Meet, holiday parades, and honor guards.

Plans for the Centennial include a hayride, intramurals, a dance, a banquet before the Military Ball, parades, and drill competitions.

A distinguishing feature of the Pershing Riflemen's uniform is a blue and white shoulder cord or fourragere. Candidates may still pledge the drill team. An added incentive to pledge is the three merits that the men receive toward their Reserve Officer Training Corp. Navy ROTC, or Air Force ROTC grade.

Waterloo Antics End as Youth Returns to Phila.

Harry Waterloo, who was taken to Philadelphia County yesterday, left approximately $2000 damage in his wake.

The 18-year-old Philipsburg youth went on two rampages at the Bellefonte County jail earlier this week. He is a Philadelphia County parole violator.

Centre County Commissioners said today that the damage he caused while a prisoner in the jail will be charged to Philadelphia County.

Waterloo completely ruined the plumbing facilities, cracked a radiator, broke two locks, destroyed plaster and did other damage to the jail.

The youth had been arrested for disorderly conduct and was held when it was learned he was on parole from Philadelphia County.

secretariat. The State Party elects class clique officers for the junior and senior classes in the spring.

The parties this year are operating under a revised elections code adopted by All-University Cabinet Sept. 23. One of the major changes in the code states that the All-University clique chairman must be elected by the entire clique.

Formerly the Lion Party clique chairman was elected by the party's steering committee and the State Party chairman, correspondingly, by a student representative council.

Cabinet Charters Parties
The code also stipulates that the cliques must submit copies of their constitutions to All-University Cabinet. This amounts to chartering of political parties by cabinet.

Previously political parties were not officially recognized as organized student groups. The new code has brought the parties under closer control of cabinet.

When first presented, the changes met heavy opposition. Foremost among the opponents of the new code were Ernest Famous, chairman of the elections committee, and Benjamin Sinclair, former Lion Party clique chairman.

Robinson Will Speak To Philatelic Society

The Mt. Nittany Philatelic Society will hold its first meeting 7:30 p.m. Monday in room 120 of the State College High School.

Norman Robinson, stamp dealer, will speak to the local stamp club. The organization is open to those interested in stamp collecting.

To achieve this, the committee recommended that students be required to schedule courses in economics, commerce, ethics, sociology, and psychology which best fulfill the objective.

The recommendations were part of a 13 point report submitted by Ernest W. Callenbach, committee chairman, to strengthen the program of general education at the University.

Discussion of the report was postponed until a special Senate meeting to be called at a later date by President Milton S. Eisenhower.

Among the other objectives and recommendations included in the report were:

1. To analyze the belief that all paths of knowledge are open to anyone who will seek them.
2. To analyze the interrelationship among various fields of endeavor.

To achieve these objectives the committee recommended that students should be required to schedule courses in several fields: physical sciences, social sciences, humanities, the arts, and literature.

3. To foster an understanding of the scientific method. It was recommended that general courses in physics, chemistry, biology, and earth sciences be given on two levels: basic courses for non-science students, and advanced courses for technical students.
4. To foster an understanding of society and one's responsibilities to it. The committee reported that no combination of courses now offered fulfilled this objective. The matter was referred to a special social science committee which was asked to consider the problem.

5. To develop an understanding of literature and the fine arts. The committee asked that all new students be given examinations in these areas when entering the University, and that on the basis of these tests students be required to schedule Art 74, English Literature 25 or 26, and Music 5.
6. To develop an appreciation of the importance of personal and community health and the proper place of sports and recreation in personal and public welfare. The committee asked that the program in the School of Physical Education be modified to develop better public attitudes toward sports and recreation.

The remaining objectives in the report were discussed in yesterday's Daily Collegian.

'Mr. State' Will Be Crowned By Congressman Van Zandt

Mr. Penn State of 1954 will be crowned Oct. 23 by Congressman James Van Zandt. Entrants must be sponsored by a recognized campus organization. Application forms due Monday have been sent to organizations by the contest committee. Additional blanks may be obtained at the hotel administration office in the Home Economics building.

Judges will select five finalists on personality, contribution to University and community, academic standing and service to Penn State. The winner will be chosen by the audience at the Bell Hop Ball Oct. 23.

Judges for this year's contest are Dean of Men Frank J. Simes; Luther H. Harshbarger, University Chaplain; Wilmer E. Kenworthy, director of student affairs; C. O. Williams, dean of admissions and registrar; Glenn Thiel, professor of physical education; and Daniel Spangler of the Student Union desk in Old Main.

Last year's winner, Richard Lemyre, received a free weekend in the Pocono Mountains, a portable radio and clothing. His prizes were valued at about $150.

Math Prof Will Speak

Mary Lister, professor of mathematics, will speak on "A Numerical Solution to the Problem of Spherical Wave Propagation" at the first fall meeting of the Central Pennsylvania Section of the Society for Industrial and Applied Mathematics at 7:30 p.m. Tuesday in 233 Sparks.

Outing Club Hike Scheduled for Sunday

The hike which was postponed last Sunday by the Penn State Outing Club will be held this Sunday in the Beaver Dam area.

Students interested in the hike may meet at 2 p.m. at the rear of Old Main, where buses will be provided. Buses will return at 6 p.m.

The hikers will divide into groups and explore trails suitable for marking. This is the first in a series of hikes planned by the club for this fall.

Philotes to Discuss

Year's Program Monday

Philotes, independent women's social organization, will discuss programs for the coming year at 6:30 p.m. Monday in the second floor lounge of Simmons Hall. All independent women, including freshmen, are invited.

Officers for the year are Sally Lyle, president; Joy Wagner, vice president; Beverly Burkhardt, secretary; and Marian Dally, treasurer.

Workshop to Offer Dancing Instructions

A workshop in square dancing, couple dances, mixers, and rhythms will be offered to physical educators, music teachers, and recreation activity leaders at Recreation Hall on Oct. 18.

Sponsored by the College of Physical Education and Athletics, each session of the workshop will be different and styled from the basics to many combinations of dance figures.
