Entrants may enclose a sample of work such as poetry or short stories, and must give name, class year, college and home address, major and minor curriculums, extracurricular activities and summer jobs.

College board members are chosen from these contestants and are given three assignments. Twenty board members are then selected to spend the month of June in the Mademoiselle offices. The guest editors help write and illustrate the 1955 August college issue.

Trabue Submits High School Contract Plan

Marion R. Trabue, dean of the College of Education, suggested to the Education Student Council recently that a contract program be set up for high school students interested in attending the University and becoming teachers.

Trabue's suggestion was prompted by a study made of Pennsylvania high school students showing that a sizable number planned to enter Penn State in education.

Trabue brought to the attention of council the problem of books being removed from room 114 in Pattee Library, recently set up especially for education students. The books are easily accessible and the room is open to anyone.

Self-nominations for the two freshman council seats may be made Oct. 18 through Oct. 22, Miss Lessig announced. Nomination blanks are available at the Student Union desk in Old Main. Election of the freshman representatives will be held Oct. 26 and 27.

Council decided to include the head of the Industrial Arts Society as an ex officio member under the ruling that all organized groups in education recognized by council will have voting power on council but will not have the right to hold office.

Diane Edelman, chairman of the pre-college contact program, reported the program of contacting prospective freshmen in education a success.

Carol Wilson was appointed the new secretary-treasurer to fill the post vacated by Susan Wescott. Nancy Scholes was appointed council representative to the University Christian Association.

Self-nominations to the two freshman council seats may be made from Oct. 18 through Oct. 22, Miss Lessig announced. Nomination blanks are available at the Student Union desk in Old Main. Election of the two freshman delegates will be held Oct. 26 and 27.
