

10 Veterans to Pace Soccermen Today

By ROY WILLIAMS

Soccer Coach Ken Hosterman has named a lineup to meet undefeated Maryland University this afternoon at College Park, Md., on which only one non-letterman has succeeded in winning a berth.

The newcomer to the Nittany eleven-man first string is sophomore Steve Flamporis of Reading. Flamporis was at the right halfback slot when Hosterman's booters swamped Bucknell, 14-1, for their first win.

Although Hosterman will field a strong and experienced squad that boasts ten lettermen, he may be without the services of his top line substitutes.

Sophomores Tom Nute and Ward Hill were placed on the injured list last week, but made the trip with the Lions' 16-man traveling squad.

Nute, who scored two goals against Bucknell in his first varsity appearance, suffered blood poisoning in his foot last week.

However, Hill, who suffered from an injured knee last week and missed four days of practice, may be able to play today if needed.

But the possibility of Hosterman playing his substitutes is very unlikely. Although ten of his 11 starters are part of the same team that edged Maryland last fall, 4-3, the Terps are expected to come back with their usual tough brand of ball. Maryland posted an 8-2 card last fall when it won the Atlantic Coast Championship.

Hosterman added his fourth sophomore choice to his traveling squad by naming Gerry Bijur, a halfback, to strengthen his reserve depth.

West Va. May Be Lions Toughest Foe

A football battle that some have called the game of the east turns up this Saturday at Beaver Field when unbeaten Penn State meets unbeaten West Virginia in a head-on collision that promises to generate plenty of sparks.

The rough-riding Mountaineers, the last team to beat Rip Engle's Lions, smashed South Carolina (the same team that stunned Army 34-20) in their opener, 26-6, and dumped George Washington last week, 13-7.

Pre-game tension is riding high on this one and the Penn State athletic department has already announced a sellout for the Homecoming battle.

Boasting a big line from end to end (it averages 210) and a speedy backfield led by lefthanded quarterback Freddy Wyant, the Southern Conference defending champs, pose the biggest hurdle for the Lions since they bounced Illinois four weeks ago.

Last season the Nittanies were moving in fine fashion after a bad start when they ran into the Mountaineers and lost a 20-19 decision when tackle Bruce Bosley, who is back again this season, blocked a Penn State punt to give the Mountaineers their winning score.

Lion scout Sevor "Tor" Toretti saw coach Art Lewis' team against South Carolina two weeks ago and left Carolina Stadium with deep impressions.

"West Virginia is definitely a top running football team," Toretti said. "Its passing was impressive, but it was the running—behind that big line—that told the story."

Toretti warned the Lions that they must rate the Mountaineers by their 26-6 win against South Carolina rather than the one-touchdown squeaker against George Washington.

"After all," he explained, "George Washington just happened to fall between two target games."

And target is just the word for it. Engle knows that West Virginia will be aiming hard this week and is priming his squad for what might be its toughest battle. In fact the Lions are fast becoming the biggest bullseye in the nation. While major colleges, particularly Penn State opponents, have been taking it on the chin, the Nittanies have rolled to three impressive victories.

Men Behind the Men...

4 Independents Cop Wins in IM Football

Four more wins were posted on the IM football scoreboard last night as the independents completely dominated play. There were no fraternities scheduled.

In games played The Royals edged out the Wildcats 7-6, the Cougars beat the Blue Devils 8-0, Beaver House defeated Town Council 13-0, and Nittany Co-Op beat Simmons Hall 6-0.

After a scoreless first half in which neither the Wildcats nor the Royals threatened, both teams broke loose and scored. The Wildcats opened the scoring when with five minutes gone in the second half, a Bill Lenzer to George Goldstein pass put the ball on the 10 yard line, and from there the same pass play to Goldstein was good for the score. Trailing most of the game, the Royals finally cracked the ice when with only 10 seconds left in the game, Jim Hawk threw a 25 yard pass to John Waugaman for the score. The score then was decided on first downs and the Royals led 2-0 to cop the victory.

Cougars Win

In the second game the Cougars did all their scoring in the first half to beat the Blue Devils. Midway in the first half, the Blue Devils, after being held on downs punted to the Cougar 45, where Bud Hampton grabbed it and then flipped to John Salva, who in turn tossed it to Paul Schonbacher for the TD.

In the waning moments of the half, Schonbacher, who was a demon on defense all through the night, caught John Howe in the end zone for a safety. The second half was tightly played with neither team being able to move.

Scwab, Miller Star

The duo of Tom Scwab and Dave Miller was all that Beaver House needed in their victory. In the first half Scwab intercepted a pass on his own 42, and on the very next play passed to Miller on the 10. A Scwab to Miller pass two plays later was good for the score. The extra point try was good. The second TD was scored on a one yard pass from Scwab to Ken Bauman. The try for the extra point failed.

In the final contest of the night Nittany Co-Op had rough going as they barely edged out Simmons Hall. The touchdown came on a 20 yard pass which Dick Wendler scored. The extra point try was no good.

University 'S' Club

Writers Lead Nittany Coaches In Grid Picks

Weekend football brought about a big shakeup in the standings of the Daily Collegian's weekly football selections. Four of the 15 games recorded in Saturday's poll completely baffled the Collegian sportswriters and Lion grid coaches who were spending their third week in the contest.

Collegian sportswriter Roy Williams moved into first place with ten correct selections and an overall average of .711. Last week he and sports editor Dick McDowell were tied for top honors. Until Saturday they had picked them at a .733 rate.

McDowell slid into a second place deadlock with assistant editor Herm Weiskopf. He picked correctly on nine contests, and Weiskopf missed only four to turn in the best average for the day. Their "to-date" average is .688.

The coaches took their second tumble in two weeks with Jim O'Hora coming out on top on a slim eight games. The mentors have a firm hold on last place with a .622 percentage.

The next edition of the contest, found under the title "Out on a Limb" will appear in Saturday's Collegian. Head Coach Rip Engle will be sending his fourth assistant into the poll in an effort to get the coaches back into the running. The three local scribes will again furnish the opposition.
