

Academic Honesty Discipline Boards To Be Proposed

Committees composed of three faculty members and two students will be set up in each college to deal with cases of academic dishonesty if All-University Cabinet accepts the student encampment academic honesty committee's report tonight.

These committees would handle first offenses only. Second and later offenses would be referred to a central disciplinary committee.

Big Powers May Study Disarming

UNITED NATIONS, N.Y., Oct. 13 (AP)—The United States, Britain and France joined Canada today in a call for a big-power group to tackle disarmament problems once more after the long-standing deadlock has been aired fully in the UN General Assembly.

They took a stand against a Philippine resolution which would have set Nov. 15 as a deadline for a report from the proposed big power group to the Assembly's political committee. That suggestion was made yesterday by the new Philippine delegate, Felixberto Serrano, without consultation with the big powers here. Western delegates said no real report could be made in such a short time.

Private Meetings Asked

Paul Martin, Canadian minister of health and welfare, told the Political Committee that Canada believed the disarmament negotiations should be carried on in private, without the searching glare of publicity, just as the talks had been conducted in London last spring.

He proposed that the group be the same as the London conference—the United States, Britain, France, Canada and Soviet Union. It would work under the 12-nation U.N. Disarmament Commission rather than under the auspices of the Political Committee as Serrano proposed.

No Deadline Fixed

Martin did not fix any deadline for a report from the group but indicated the negotiations should be as thorough as possible.

After some spirited procedural talk in the committee, Serrano decided not to press for an immediate vote on his proposal but to wait until all resolutions are voted on at the end of the general debate, which is just beginning.

Bunche to Speak For Career Day

By JOANNE WOHLEBER

Ralph Bunche, renowned United Nations mediator for Palestine and director of the UN department of trusteeship and information, will be the principal speaker at the annual Career Day of the College of Business Administration Nov. 4, in Schwab Auditorium.

Bunche is a native of Detroit. He majored in political science at the University of California where he was graduated with highest honors in 1927.

Bunche did his graduate work at Harvard University. He has also done postdoctorate work at several other universities and has received more than 40 honorary degrees.

Some of his better known publications include 'A World View of Race,' 'An American Dilemma,' and 'Africa, the War and Peace Aims.' He also has written many articles on colonial policy, trusteeship, race relations and minority problems.

Thomas Brasher, co-chairman of the Career Day Committee, said students, faculty, and administration officials outside the College of Business Administration may hear Bunche.

Topic Not Announced

Bunche has not yet announced his topic, although it will not concern business administration.

In announcing the selection of Bunche, Ossian R. MacKenzie, dean of the College of Business Administration, also announced that the Career Day program, like that of last year, will include a series of panel discussions. The panels will be concerned with management, marketing, accounting, insurance and finance, and economics and labor.

The purpose of the Career Day is to explore the opportunities for service in the major fields of commerce, industry, labor, trade, and government. Students are given opportunity to hear leaders in business and public service.

The day also is intended to afford an opportunity, in panel discussions, to appraise the duties, obligations, and responsibilities of the business community under

Phys Ed Prof Cites Problems In Curriculum

By PHYLLIS PROPERT

Members of the physical education profession must solve a lot of the problems now facing them if they are to earn the respect of laymen, William Meredith, professor of physical education at the University of Pennsylvania, said yesterday.

Speaking before students and faculty of the College of Physical Education and Athletics, Meredith said a student major club at the University would help students solve some of these problems before they meet them personally.

"Not only is there a lack of unity among members of the profession as to what we are trying to do, but there is also a gross lack of acceptance of the physical education profession on the part of educators and laymen," he said.

He said students as instructors must not just "throw the ball out," as many teachers do, but must teach physical education in order to overcome the lack of acceptance for their profession.

Meredith said that some of the problems that hurt the profession are lack of facilities and time, poorly prepared teachers, laziness on the part of good teachers, and poverty stricken programs in the schools.

Committee OK's Building Plans

Preliminary plans for a classroom and office building to be constructed at the University, by the General State Authority have been approved by the executive committee of the Board of Trustees, President Milton S. Eisenhower said yesterday.

The building, which will be of red brick with limestone trim, will be located north of Pollock road, directly east of Osmond Laboratory. It will include 61 classrooms with seats for 2134 students, and 102 offices with facilities for 113 faculty members. Each of two large classrooms will have a capacity of 126 students.

The south unit of the building, paralleling and facing Pollock road, will have three floors and will be 120 feet long and 63 feet wide. Offices will be located in this unit. The main entrance to the building will be at the southeast corner of the unit.

Adjoining the southeast corner of this unit will be an L-shaped wing of four floors that will extend 197 feet north, then 93 feet west. It will be 55 feet wide.

To the west of this L, extending toward the south of the offices unit, will be a two-story section containing the two large classrooms, one on each floor.

Plans and specifications for the building are now being drawn by the GSA in preparation for the asking of bids.

Plans for the construction of the new classroom building to be built on campus were announced by the physical plant Oct. 12, 1953.

Maple cottage is located on the proposed site.

Cabinet Motion Is Supported By Ed Council

Education Student Council voted to support the proposed method of choosing candidates for "Who's Who Among American Colleges and Universities" to be brought before All-University Cabinet tonight.

The method provides that each member of cabinet will submit a list of suggested senior candidates to the All-University vice president and the Collegian editor who will compile the final list. Self-nominations for the two freshman council seats must be submitted by Monday, Carol Durbin, elections chairman, said.

Nomination blanks are available at the Student Union desk in Old Main. Elections will be held Oct. 26 and 27 in front of Schwab Auditorium.

Council decided to send a representative to the United Nations in December. Judith Hance and Nancy Scholl will attend this week's Education College executive meeting for Sarah Lessig, council president.
