WEST VIRGINIA POST MORTEM

Just a few last remarks about the West Virginia game and then we'll bury it forever:

Rip Engle, attributed the loss to the Mountaineers to three things—too many fumbles, the loss of Bill Straub, and, of course, an extra-good West Virginia team.

Engle had plenty to say about the West Virginians—the team that edged his Lions 20-19 at Beaver Field last year.

"West Virginia was much sharper this year than they were when they beat us last season," he said.

Last year it was a case of doing everything right and losing while this year the Lions made some costly mistakes.

Fumbles, for instance, cut deeply into the Lion offensive game. Three bobbles in the third period stymied Lion drives when it hurt. But two of these—on the optional play—might be better attributed to alert West Virginia defensive play.

The West Virginia line (210 pounds per man) was easily the best faced by the Lions this year. Again, as last year, it was tackle Bruce Bosley who led the charge. The big junior was immovable on defense and gave Don Bailey a good chase every time he went back to pass.

Bailey incidentally, threw his third touchdown pass of the season when he hit Ron Younker on the 10-yard line late in the second period, which brings us to Jesse Arnelle:

The big Lion end paved the way for Younker on that play with a solid block on halfback Bobby Moss who was moving in for the tackle. Jesse has been more aggressive on defense this year than we've ever seen him before, and is playing the same flawless offensive game he played two years ago as a sophomore.

Lenny Moore continues to strengthen his strong bid for an all-American berth with each week of play. The Flash added another 131 yards to his rushing total against the Mountaineers, bringing the figure up to 465 in four games. His eight yard touchdown run was his fifth.

What may be more important, he saved three touchdowns himself Saturday, breaking up one TD pass and making two goal-line tackles.

As a team the Lions have piled up 1199 yards to 859 for the opposition. They've averaged five yards per play. On the darker side, they've fumbled 15 times and 12 of these were recovered by opposing forces.

Future Foes Pitt, TCU Post Wins

It's getting to be almost a rule that just two of Penn State's future football opponents should win weekend games. This time it was Texas Christian and Pitt which came out on top. Rutgers, Holy Cross, and Penn remained winless on the season.

Pitt's Panthers pulled the major upset of the day, upending Navy, 21-19. Sophomore Corny Salvetera scored twice and Henry Ford once.

In another game where the extra-point meant a lot, Texas Christian nipped Texas A. & M., 21-20. Quarterback Ronnie Clinkscale scored on a keep-play from three yards out for the initial tally. The Aggies made things hot for the Horned Frogs in the last period, scoring their third touchdown with but 90 seconds left in the game.

An 86-yard kickoff return by Al Grieco and a 77-yard touchdown run by Jack Yohe gave William & Mary a 14-7 win over Rutgers Saturday.

Marquette did all its scoring in the final quarter to defeat Holy Cross, 19-14. Two of these markers were registered by Bob German on plunges from the one-yard line.

Richie Gaskell, an All-Southern Conference end last year, ran an intercepted forward pass 84 yards for a touchdown and took a 37-yard heave for another to lead George Washington to a 32-27 victory over Penn.

Arnelle Chosen 'Lineman of Week'

Jesse Arnelle, outstanding Nittany Lion left end, has been chosen Penn State's "lineman of the week" by the Daily Collegian sports staff.

The 6-5 senior griddler was chosen by the scribes this week for his fine all-around play, both on offense and defense, in the Penn State-West Virginia game Saturday. Arnelle, who has returned to the form that won him national acclaim as a sophomore, is one of three present varsity performers seeking their fourth football letter.

Woodrow has improved his position in each meet, placing 23rd in the opening battle with Navy and Villanova, eighth at Cornell, and seventh on Saturday. Mowry, who came in 13th the first two meets, moved up to 11th. This improvement by the sophomores helped give the Lions the balance needed to form a winning combination.
