

3 Injuries May Hurt Lions; Harriers Will Meet Alumni

2 Fullbacks, Balthaser Are Shelved

Giants on the attack again, as they were a year ago, are TCU's Ron Clinkscale and the Lions' All-America candidate Lenny Moore. They promise to provide the thrills today.

Moore, third among the nation's rushing leaders this week, has accumulated 465 yards in four games and shows no signs of letting up. The flashy halfback collected 131 yards in his best day to date, last week, and scored his fifth touchdown of the season. He has been the key to Penn State's split-T attack.

Clinkscale at QB

Clinkscale, a sub quarterback until he ran wild in the Frog's 20-7 upset of Southern Cal, sparks a split-T offense run from the regular T-formation. He and fullback Buddy Dike have been the work horses in Martin's backfield.

The six-foot, 180 pound quarterback, moved into the signal calling slot this season after two years as a halfback. Last year he scored once against the Lions and passed for another while his team lost, 27-21.

Pound-for-pound, TCU will hold the edge today. Their line averages 210 pounds, about five more than the Lions' and they hold the same weight advantage in the backfield, 190 to 185.

Three members of Martin's backfield—Dike, Ray Taylor, and Jim Swink—are newcomers, but all of his linemen are returnees from last year's club.

Lions Workout

The Lions arrived here by plane yesterday and went through a short workout at Amon Carter Stadium before retiring to a nearby ranch for the night.

The Penn State party will again board a plane immediately after the game today and will arrive in State College at 1 p.m. tomorrow.

Penn State won't be without musical support today. The famous White Oak High School 80-piece "Rough Neck" band will represent the Nittany Lions at the stadium.

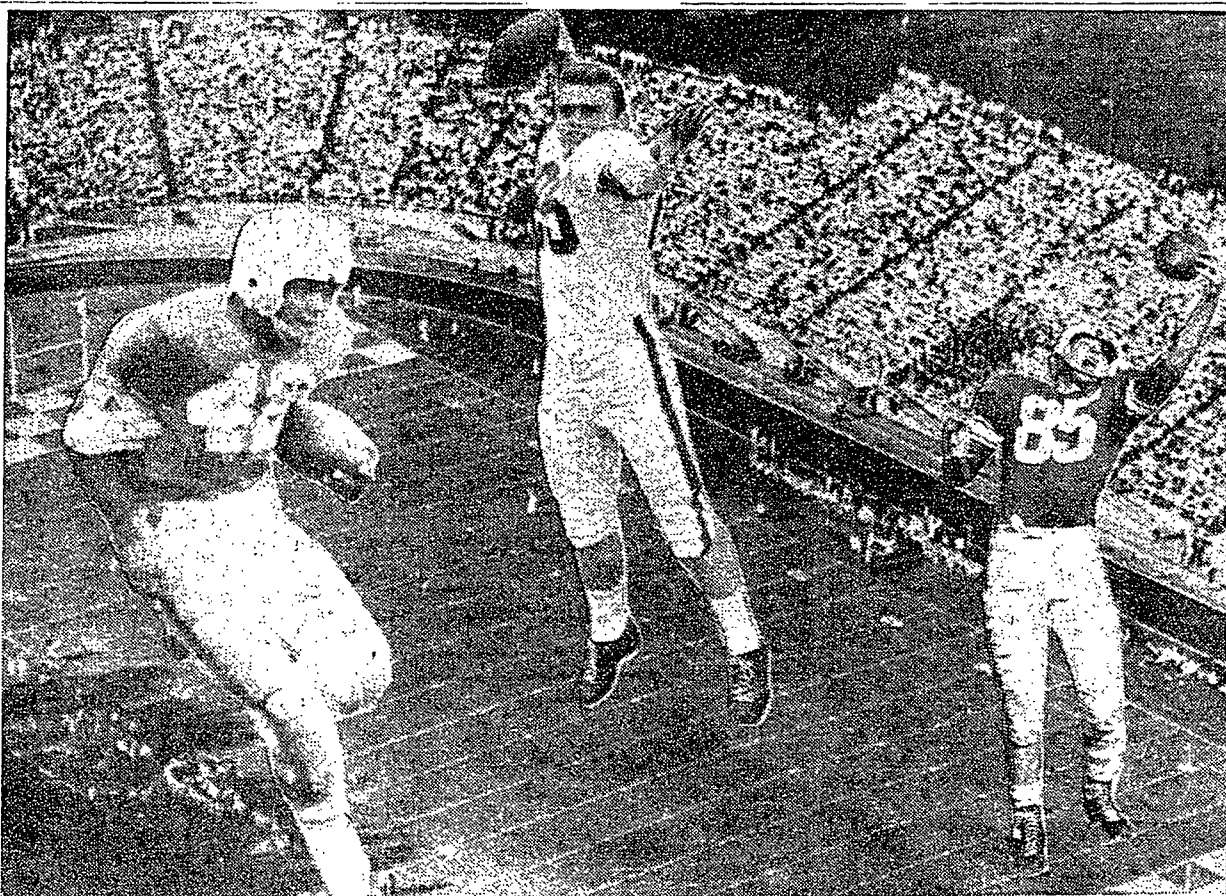

The band provided the musical impetus for the Lions in their Cotton Bowl in 1948.

Sale of Athletics Still Not Settled

PHILADELPHIA, Oct. 22 (AP)—After a week of closed-door meetings and public announcements the question of the final sale of the Philadelphia Athletics continued unsettled today as a battery of lawyers worked over the intricate business details.

This sale by the House of Mack, which still needs American League approval, is a multi-million-dollar proposition. The eight Philadelphia businessmen put up $250,000 each and, in addition, they'll take over the club's $1.6 million mortgage on Connie Mack Stadium plus other debts.

Penn State halfback Lenny Moore was named all-State during his high school days at Reading, Pa.

Olympians Head List Of Ex-Lions

Penn State cross-country Coach Chick Werner today will have a chance to do what many coaches and sports fans have always dreamed of doing—he will witness the stars of the past against the stars of the present.

A group of former Nittany hill-and-dalers, including several Olympians, will run a four-mile race against the Penn State varsity. The race, which will start at 1 p.m., will be held on the golf course.

Olympians Curt Stone, Bill Ashenfelter and Herm Goffberg, and possibly Horace Ashenfelter, head the list of all-time stars who will be running for the alumni in the second meeting of these two outfits.

Foot Injury

If Horace Ashenfelter's injured foot is well enough he will be taking part in the event for the first time. He was unable to take part last year due to previous plans.

Other former Nittany harriers who will be running are Red Hollen, Bob Roessler, Bob Freebairn, Mitch Williams, John St. Clair, and Bob Parsons.

Eight of the ten alumni were either captains or co-captains of Penn State cross-country or track teams. The only ones who did not hold this position are Williams and Goffberg. All ten harriers competed for at least one championship cross-country team.

Olympic Victory

Horace Ashenfelter is the only Olympic Gold Medal winner. His upset win in the 3000-meter steeplechase was the highlight of the 1952 Olympics. Ashenfelter set a new two-mile indoor record earlier this year.

Last year the alumni harriers were defeated by the Penn State varsity, 27-28. Bill Ashenfelter

Bad Health Forces Dawson to Quit

PITTSBURGH, Oct. 22 (AP)—Lowell (Red) Dawson, Pitt's ailing football coach, stepped out for the balance of the season today and the university immediately named Athletic Director Tom Hamilton to fill the post.

Dawson, who entered the hospital ten days ago with an "heart irregularity," told Hamilton he would be unable to continue his duties this fall. Dawson left the hospital today.

But an informed source said, "Red is a sick man. He's improved but he'll need an extended rest. He looks tired and worn out."

Hamilton will direct the team tomorrow against Northwestern at Pitt Stadium.

Cub Booters Seek First

Already veterans of one encounter, Penn State's freshman booters will go after their first win of the season, when they meet the Cosmopolitan eleven this afternoon, in a contest which is to follow the varsity encounter with Colgate.

The yearlings will have to go all out on this one, as the Cosmopolitans pushed Ken Hosterman's varsity to a second-half rally before the first-stringers triumphed, 4-1.

The frosh's first encounter ended on a sour note, when the Lock Haven State Teachers defeated them, 3-2. However, this afternoon's encounter may produce some surprises, as far as the frosh are concerned.

In recent practice sessions with the varsity the yearlings have been holding their own and have triumphed more than once.

Center-forward standout Terry Reber and halfbacks Frank Walls and Glen Spade have played a major part in these uprisings.

Coaches Paul Burdan and Jack Carrier expect to field a team which will largely compose the aggregation that will make the trip to Maryland Oct. 30.
