

Queen Picture Deadline Today

The deadline for entry photographs for Junior Prom Queen is noon today at the Student Union Desk in Old Main.

All pictures should be 5 inches by 7 inches or 8 inches by 10 inches and should include the contestant's name, address, telephone number, and sponsor.

Any fraternity, sorority, or independent group may sponsor a junior enrolled in the University for queen.

Frosh to Vote For WSGA, WRA Offices

Women's Student Government Association and Women's Recreation Association will hold joint primary elections for freshman senator and freshman representative from 10 a.m. to 7 p.m. today.

Only freshman women are eligible to vote. Women living in Thompson hall will vote in their dormitory. Women living in town, Women's building, and McAllister hall will vote in McAllister hall.

Each freshman woman will vote for two WSGA and four WRA candidates in the primary election. Candidates for freshman senator are Carol Brady, Katharine Dickson, Carolyn Ginna, Joyce Herbst, Patricia Lehr, Marianne Maier, and Stephanie Sills.

Candidates for WRA freshman representatives are Joanne Bedenk, Barbara Cox, Barbara Drum, Marie Harvey, Jean Melvin, Elizabeth Savidge, and Catherine Wilson.

Final elections will be held on Thursday. Women will vote for one candidate from the finalists elected today.

Following the final election on Thursday, WSGA will appoint one freshman senator.

Players Call For Costumes

Did you ever try to find a military policeman's uniform on a university campus? This is one of the problems facing Players costume crew.

Players are presenting "Mr. Roberts" Nov. 5 and 6 in Schwab Auditorium and at present still lack some of the costumes needed for the play.

Besides the military police uniform, they need a military policeman's helmet, an Army nurses uniform, sun tans, bill caps, overseas caps, white crew caps, dress whites, puttees, dungarees, and blue shirts.

Anyone who has any of these articles of clothing and can lend them to Players may take them to the costume room in the basement of Schwab Auditorium between 7 and 9 tonight.

Fenstermacher to Speak

David Fenstermacher, member of the Nittany Grotto, will speak at a meeting of Alpha Phi Omega, national service honorary, at 7 tonight in 14 Sparks.

Fenstermacher will discuss spelunking and will show colored slides.

Freshman Fattens Pigs for Pastime

By DOTTIE BENNETT

Perhaps not many people think of Berkshire hog raising as a typical activity for a home economics major, but for Elizabeth Anne Prough, a first semester student from Sykesville, Md., it has proved not only an interesting hobby, but has also brought her many stock show championships, as well as having become a source of profit.

Elizabeth's latest honor is winning the Maryland 4-H competition for her hog raising. In November she will go to Chicago for the national 4-H convention.

This isn't the first time Elizabeth and her pigs have won honors. She has been raising Berkshire swine since 1948, when she bought four market hogs. Since then she has won 340 ribbons and a sizable bank account in prize money.

At the Maryland State Fair this year, she won the largest number of championship ribbons in the Berkshire class at the swine show.

The Berkshire swine are the oldest breed in America, and the oldest registered meat-type swine in the world; therefore, they are called the aristocrats of pigs.

Elizabeth raises them because her father did and she wants to follow in his footsteps.

Elizabeth has trained her pigs for the show ring, and is careful not to make pets of them, because "then they won't do anything for you."

The cane Elizabeth uses to give commands to her pigs while in the show ring was made by her father, whose hobby is making canes for show ring use.

Her interest in home economics is also evident, for she makes as many of her own clothes as possible, and is an expert cook. She plans to major in home economics extension and to return to Maryland to work after she graduates.

Square Dance 'Class' Offered

Before the square dance held by the University Christian Association at 7 p.m. every Tuesday in the Temporary Union Building there is a 15-minute period of instruction in the basic techniques of folk and square dancing. The instructions, given by Kevin Gelderman, are open to anyone interested in learning to square dance.

Gelderman, a fifth semester business administration major, has been interested in square dancing for 12 years and is well on the way to becoming a professional folk and square dance leader and caller. For two years he has been a member of the Delaware Valley Folk and Square Dance Leaders, a group of semi-professional callers who are working to promote more and better square dancing in the Delaware Valley and Philadelphia area.

Organized in 1950

This group first came into existence in 1950 and was then made up of about six or eight callers and their families. At present there are about 75 members and associate members. These members lead square dances in the Philadelphia area in schools, church groups, YMCA's and YWCA's, and at private parties.

Anyone who is interested in promoting better square dancing and is willing to lead or instruct dancing becomes an associate member. These associate members must take a calling test and then be approved by the members to receive a full membership, which includes the privilege of voting as well as taking part in business affairs.

The calling test consists of performing any four figures the prospective member feels he can do best, and giving instructions in any one folk dance.

Meets Every Month

The group holds a business meeting once a month to discuss any problems pertinent to square dancing. The meeting is held at the home of one of the members, and a dance is held afterwards. At the dance a new figure is taught so that the callers can take it back to their own groups.

The Delaware Valley organization holds a folk and square dance festival every year in late spring.

Each summer at a camp at Stephany, Conn., callers from various sections of the country teach the calls of their locality for the other square dance leaders.

The Delaware Valley Folk and Square Dance Leaders maintain a business office in Philadelphia, where callers or instructors can be obtained for private and public parties or classes.

Weekend Mixers Set For Coeds

Friday and Saturday night get-togethers, sponsored by Leonides, will be held for all women in the women's dorms, starting Nov. 5.

Joyce Shusman, in giving the report at Leonides meeting last night, said that the get-togethers are being held for women who do not have dates over the weekend. Refreshments will be served and if the get-togethers are well attended, they will be carried through next semester.

Several amendments to the Constitution were read and approved the second time and were voted upon by the Council. The changes include meetings to be held every week on Monday, and changing the name of Pennsylvania State College wherever it appears in the Constitution to Pennsylvania State University.

A change in the membership of the Executive Committee was voted on. The committee will now consist of a president, vice president, recording secretary, corresponding secretary, treasurer, parliamentarian, and the chairmen of the publicity, social, cultural, athletic, and social welfare committees.

Other changes were that the Executive Committee shall appoint the publicity, social, cultural, athletic, and social welfare chairmen with the approval of the council. The president shall make all appointments necessary to the proper functioning of Leonides. She may appoint council members to temporary executive positions.

A final amendment change stated that each proposed amendment shall be read at two consecutive council meetings and shall be brought to a vote at the second of these two meetings. In a by-law, council decided that an alternate representative who succeeds the representative will be replaced by an elected alternate instead of an appointed one.
