

Gridders Are Solid Favorites

Moore May Top Yardage Mark Today

By DICK McDOWELL

A solid favorite to win its fifth game of the season, Penn State pits its robust running game against air-minded Holy Cross this afternoon at Beaver Field.

The Lions, back home after two straight road games, are 12-point favorites to whip the dangerous Crusaders from Worcester, Mass.

It's band day at Penn State and despite wintery weather a crowd of 20,000 is expected to watch about 4000 high school bandmen in a gala half-time show.

The kickoff is set for 1:30 p.m. Lion coach Rip Engle, whose team battered Penn, 35-13 last week, will be counting on a ripping ground offense that reached its peak against the Quakers.

Moore May Set Record

Led by all-American candidate Lenny Moore, who may break the Penn State rushing mark today, the Nittanians are expected to travel mostly by foot while Dr. Eddie Anderson's team is expected to put on the heaviest aerial show the Lions have seen this fall.

Moore, with 717 rushing yards under his belt, and right halfbacks Billy Kane and Ron Younker, form a swashbuckling trio that has been a devastating weapon for the Lions. Younker proved himself a ball totting demon last season and became increasingly better this year with the flashy Kane at his heels.

Kane Ran for 130

Against Penn, Kane replaced Younker, who was injured in the starting slot and ran for 130 yards and one touchdown. The performance earned him another starting berth today but it's a good bet that he'll be sharing the wing-back duties with Younker.

Injuries, however, will force at least one change in the Lion starting lineup. Tackle Otto Kneidinger, progressively becoming Penn State's top lineman, is still hampered by a badly bruised ankle and pulled leg muscle. He'll be available for limited duty, but 215-pound Gene Danser will get the starting assignment.

Ike to Consult Party Leaders

WASHINGTON, Nov. 5 (AP)—President Eisenhower, described as eager to get on "cordial and constructive" working terms with the Democrats, today called leaders of both parties in Congress to a conference on foreign policy Nov. 17.

While this is not the first time that a White House briefing has been held for both Democratic and Republican leaders, it gave new emphasis to Eisenhower's expressed wish for good relations.

Wednesday, the day after the voters decided to replace Republicans with Democrats in control of the new Congress, Eisenhower said he would consult with leaders of both parties on both domestic and foreign issues.

It was Sen. William T. Knowland of California, who will step out as the Senate majority leader in January, who pictured the President as eager to establish "close, cordial and constructive" relations with the new Democratic leadership.

Meanwhile the two top Democrats in the new Congress met, in Rep. Sam Rayburn's little law of-

Men May Apply To Be Counselors

Men who wish to serve as resident counselors in men's dormitories for the spring semester may file applications in the Dean of Men's office, James W. Dean, assistant to the dean of men, has announced.

Men graduate students and sixth, seventh, and eighth semester men undergraduates may apply, Dean said. Applicants should have a satisfactory academic record and experience in extra-curricular activities, he said.

4000 to March In 5th Annual Band Day Parade

The fifth annual Band Day parade will start at 11 a.m. today with approximately 4000 high school musicians in sixty bands participating in the ceremonies.

The parade, to be led by the State College High School band, will start at Recreation Hall and move south on Burrowes street, on College avenue and then east on College to Shortlidge road. From there, the bands will march up Shortlidge and down Pollock road, to the corner of Burrowes and Pollock.

During the half-time of the Penn State-Holy Cross game the bands will play "Washington Post," "Men of Ohio," and "Alma Mater." They will be directed by James W. Dunlop, Blue Band director.

Six Frosh Elected To Eng Council

Six freshmen have been elected to the Engineering Student Council.

Chosen from their major, they are John Eaton, mechanical engineering; James Bogle, electrical engineering; Harry Wimer, civil engineering; Robert Stroup, industrial engineering; Karl Kirk, aeronautical engineering; and Teddy Boose, architecture.

Joseph Myers was elected sophomore representative from engineering science.

About 15 per cent of the 900 students enrolled in engineering voted according to George Kulynich, president of the council.

Directory Sale Begins Monday

The 1954-55 Student Directory will go on sale at 8 a.m. Monday at the Student Book Exchange, the office of the Registrar in Willard Hall, and in downtown book stores.

The book, which sells for 49 cents plus one cent tax, contains address and telephone number, class, and curriculum of each student on campus and also information on freshmen at Mont Alto.

The sale will continue until all copies are sold.

Cowden Crowned Junior Prom Queen; Receives Cup, Gifts

By SALLY SYKES

Lois Cowden, fifth semester psychology major, was crowned Junior Prom Queen last night by Tommy Dorsey. Miss Cowden, in a blue net gown, passed through a cordon, composed of members of junior hat societies, to the band stand.

She received an engraved loving cup from John Thalimer,

Junior class president, and flowers and several gifts from downtown merchants.

Miss Cowden, sponsored by Delta Chi, was one of five finalists. The four runners-up—Patricia Dickinson, Ruth Grigoletti, Ann Lederman, and Jean Yemm served in her court. The group was introduced by Earl Seely, Junior class vice president.

Miss Cowden is a member of the Daily Collegian circulation staff, LaVie staff, and the Future Teachers of America. In her freshman year she belonged to the bowling club and was on the Froth Promotion board.

She is a member of Alpha Gamma Delta and comes from Bethlehem. Last year she was a finalist in the Dairy Queen contest and in high school she was in the court of honor for the Senior Prom.

When she's graduated, Miss Cowden hopes to do work in educational guidance.

Miss Cowden was very surprised when she found she was to be sponsored by Delta Chi for the contest, and equally thrilled upon being named the queen.

More than 1200 persons attended.

A Moulin Rouge theme was carried out by the use of a lowered ceiling, dim lights, large French sketches, and shadow girls. French pylons of the national colors with large fleur-de-lis on top and a large painting of the Eiffel tower blended to the atmosphere.

The weather was more cooperative this year for the dance. Last year, Ralph Flanagan was unable to appear because of heavy snow causing accidents to several of the band members.

Council Studies 3 Revisions To Constitution

The Chemistry-Physics Student Council Wednesday night studied possible revisions to the council constitution. Joseph Eberly, constitutionist.

Joseph Eberly, constitution revision committee chairman, suggested that once a member is elected to the council in April, he will serve only until June of the following year. According to the present constitution, members are elected to serve until their graduation.

The committee also recommended that the necessary average for council membership be raised to 1.2. Presently it is 1.0.

Eberly said the committee favored a revision in the distribution of members according to class and curriculum. This revision would change senior representation from 12 to six; sophomore from four to seven; and freshman from two to six. Juniors would continue to elect eight representatives.

The committee suggested that the 27 council members should be divided among the following curriculums: physics, four representatives; pre-medical, six; chemistry and commercial chemistry, five; science, four; and chemical engineering, eight.

Council members will vote on constitutional revisions Nov. 17.

Bunche Talks On Segregation

By ANN LEH

The April Supreme Court decision outlawing segregation in the public schools is "like a plunge into a cold shower," Ralph Bunche, director of the United Nations Trusteeship department, and 1950 Nobel Peace Prize winner, said in an informal interview Thursday afternoon.

Continuing his analogy, Bunche said, "Once the initial shock is over, things won't seem so unbearable after all."

He said he felt sure that the American public would accept the segregation ruling as it has accepted so many new frontiers in racial integration in the past. He cited the example of New York State's fair employment practices act as an excellent example of public reaction.

Prevents Discrimination

This law, like similar ones in other states and cities, prevents employers from discriminating in hiring because of the race, creed, or nationality of the applicant.

"At first," he said, "there was vigorous protest. But now we find that there are very few appeals to the FEPC board. Employers have accepted it."

Bunche discounted the threats of several Southern states to abolish their public schools in favor of white-only state subsidized private schools.

"The threats are only tactics through which they hope to scare the public," he said. "I do not believe that any state would actually abolish its public schools. Public education is too integral a part of our democracy."

Smokes Continually

Bunche smoked continuously during the interview, lighting his cigarettes with a rare Italian engraved American lighter.

From racial issues, the topic of conversation switched to the problem of the United States recognizing Communist China.

"The idea of the United States recognizing Red China at the present time is absurd," Bunche said. "Until a peace is reached in Korea, we are technically still at war against Red China."

To accept the Peiping regime as the lawful government of China would be "to put the law of force above the force of law," Bunche said.
