

'Sing' Will End Mardi Weekend

The Men's Glee Club, directed by Frank Gullo, will sing several selections at the all-University Sing at 2 p.m. Sunday in Schwab Auditorium. Gullo, associate professor of music, and Hummel Fishburn, professor of music, will lead group singing.

The sing, final event of the Mardi Gras Weekend, is being sponsored by Scrolls, senior women's hat society, and Cwens, sophomore women's hat society. The weekend is being sponsored by all women's hat societies.

Danny Grove and his orchestra will be featured at the Mardi Ball, sponsored by Chimes, junior women's hat society. The ball will be from 9 p.m. to midnight in the Temporary Union Building. Tickets for the informal dance are $1.50.

Mardi Gras King will be crowned during intermission by Joyce Shusman, president of Mortar Board, senior women's hat society, and Patricia Dickinson, president of Chimes.

The three finalists for king will be chosen from the twenty candidates by penny votes at the Mardi Gras Carnival to be held from 8 to 11 p.m. Friday in Recreation Hall. Mortar Board is sponsoring the carnival.

Proceeds from the carnival will go to the Charlotte E. Ray Scholarship Fund, a project of Mortar Board. Miss Ray was a former dean of women of the University.

This is the first year that all women's hat societies have sponsored Mardi Gras weekend. In previous years only Mortar Board and Chimes sponsored the weekend events.

Finch Urges Integration Of Culture With Education

By JO WOHLBER

Henry A. Finch, associate professor of philosophy, delved into a philosophy of general education at the meeting of the Faculty Luncheon Club yesterday.

Finch alerted faculty members to the responsibility of a university or college to integrate cultural standards in its students. This is an aspect of education of which students are often unaware.

However, Finch emphasized that such a cultural integration must not divert the educational program from its main purpose in developing knowledge to the greatest capacity of the student.

Man Often Called to Act

He explained that man is often called to act upon incomplete knowledge in which moral rights and responsibilities must be dealt with. During one's college years, students should be acquiring a background of criterion on which to base such unprecedented reactions to a problem, Finch said.

Finch feels that culture no longer comes under the auspices of family or church. Culture is no longer restricted to a select few. The masses are no longer confined to a 'folk culture,' he said.

This transfer of cultural background to a large percentage of common men has resulted in a decline of supernatural sanctions governing conduct, a movement toward democracy, a diffusion of the right to criticize, and a complexity in the structure of human inter-relations, said Finch.

'Vocational Culture'

As a consequence, we have developed a 'vocational culture,' he said. Minds are biased by regional skills leaving many people socially inadequate as a part of all society. Our educational programs may train us to fit in only with our particular vocational group, he said.

This 'professionalization' demands the training of a smaller elite, he explained. In 1950 only between 20% to 40% of all youths between the ages of 18 to 20 were attending college, he added.

It is this small percentage that receives the opportunity to explore tastes, ideas and intellectual habits at college, he said. He believes a calculation and evaluation stimulus is lacking in most modern homes.

The University, in forming a standard of life to assist its students in discovering their guiding philosophies, must be aware of certain dangers, Finch warned.

Monopolies of radicals tend to form where a university takes on these responsibilities, he added. These ideas must not be imposed science as a clarification of judgment, and an awareness of consequences, he said.

The purpose of culture, he said, is to make man less common. In closing, Finch quoted, "Think on the seed ye spring from . . . follow virtue and knowledge unafraid."
