

Quota for Blood Drive Falls Short by 96 Pints; Walk-ins to Be Accepted

Two-hundred and four pledge forms have been turned in for the blood drive today and tomorrow in the Temporary Union Building. The goal for the drive is 300 pints.

Walk-ins will be accepted at any time during the drive, Mrs. Edwin H. vanDeusen, secretary of the State College Chapter of the American Red Cross, said yesterday, but are preferred from 10:45 a.m. to noon and 2 to 3 p.m. today, and from 11 a.m. to noon tomorrow. These hours are not as fully scheduled, she said.

No Donors After 4

The Johnstown Bloodmobile will be at the TUE from 10 a.m. to 5 p.m. each day. No donors will be accepted after 4 p.m., Mrs. vanDeusen said, because the process will take about 40 minutes. Donors who have indicated 4 p.m. as their free hour have been scheduled for 3:45 p.m. in an effort to have them apply before 4 p.m.

Donors will be given a physical examination before donating. A donor who has had a severe illness in the past month may not give blood. If he has had an operation in the past six months, he must have his doctor's advice. Donors taking medications, such as for thyroid, will be rejected.

Release Form

Mrs. vanDeusen also stated that persons under 21 must have a release form signed by their parents or guardians. She said a number of pledge forms were rejected because the applicant had failed to secure the release form.

A donor must weigh 110 pounds to give a pint of blood. A fraction of a pint may be donated by persons under 110 pounds.

Donors should not eat any fats for at least four hours before giving blood, Mrs. vanDeusen said. However, she urged that donors do eat some solid food before donating because there is a chance of some reaction if the stomach is empty.

Alpha Phi Omega Helping

Alpha Phi Omega, men's service fraternity, will set up equipment for the bloodmobile. Four hostesses will be present each hour to help with registration and serve light refreshments to the donors.

The blood drive is held once each semester at the University. The drive is sponsored by the State College chapter through a student committee.

Post Office To Honor University

A cancellation mark, honoring the University's 100th birthday, will be used on mail leaving the State College post office after Dec. 15, Louis H. Bell, director of public information, said yesterday.

The use of the cancellation mark was given official approval by borough postmaster Robert J. Miller yesterday, Bell said. The design for the cancellation is not yet definite, he stated, but several sketches are under consideration.

Miller said the cancellation would be put in use Dec. 15, if the design is approved and the die for it is made in time. He said the design must be approved by the Assistant Postmaster General of the United States.

The cancellation mark will be the second means of bringing the University's Centennial before the public by use of the United States mail. First month Postmaster General Arthur H. Summerfield announced that a special Centennial postage stamp will be issued next year.

The stamp will honor the first land grant colleges in the nation—Michigan State College, founded Feb. 12, 1855, and the University, founded Feb. 22, 1855. The design, at the time, was not definite and still has not yet been determined by the post office department. The approval must come from the artist in the department.

The stamp will be first issued from the post office in East Lansing, Mich., on Feb. 12, Bell stated. It will probably be issued at the University Feb. 22, he said.

The request of Thailand to have a special UN team observe any possible threat to its territory from the Communist forces in Indochina was the main discussion topic.

Robert Cole, Linda Holmes, Doris Humphrey, Rosemarie Yanni, and Paul Zrowka were delegates from the University. Dr. Elton Atwater, associate professor of political science, accompanied the delegation.

BusAd Group To Study Evaluation

Richard Favro, president of the Business Administration Student Council, appointed a committee to investigate an evaluation of faculty by Business Administration students last night at the council meeting.

Appointed to the committee were Anthony Pecone, Bruce Geisinger and William Clark. Plans for the evaluation state that the faculty members will pass evaluation slips to their students. The committee will then tabulate the results of the dean's office.

Favro announced that the first Business Administration Bulletin will be published at the end of this week. The bulletin will include news of the College of Business Administration, the student council, organizations, and personality sketches of some of the outstanding business administration students.

Michael Doyle will be editor of the bulletin; Nancy Blaha, managing editor; and Max Frohwein, business manager, Favro announced.

Plans were discussed for a faculty-council luncheon to be held in the State College Hotel sometime after Thanksgiving.

Favro suggested that plans be made for a joint meeting of the eight business college clubs. Such a meeting would give members of the council and the clubs a chance to become better acquainted, he said. No action was taken on the suggestion.

Favro asked for a list of council members interested in speaking in their home town high schools to promote Penn State and the College of Business Administration.

Books which are being collected for Stillman University in the Philippine Islands will be packed next week for shipment, Favro announced. Stillman's Business Administration College was burned recently and the University requested old books from our students. Books may still be taken to 108 Sparks, Favro said.

The written examination will be given Jan. 8. The final date for filing applications for the examination is Nov. 30.

Additional information and application forms may be obtained in 119 Sparks or at the University Placement Service, 112 Old Main.

Prexy to Go To Museum Dedication

Dr. Milton S. Eisenhower, president of the University, will leave for Abilene, Kansas today to participate in the dedication of the Eisenhower Museum, honoring his brother, President Dwight D. Eisenhower.

The museum is a part of "The Eisenhower Foundation Organized to Promote Citizenship and to Honor Veterans of America's Wars, Inc." The Eisenhower Foundation is a non-profit, educational institution solely dependent for support and maintenance on the tax-exempt, voluntary contributions from the American public.

The museum is a modern building containing most of the President's collection of mementos, trophies, medals, souvenirs and personal tokens of honor valued at over $1,500,000. Starting with his early boyhood in Abilene, the museum displays trace the life of the President through high school in Abilene, West Point, his military career and on to the presidency. Altogether there are over 2400 items.

Also in the Foundation is the Eisenhower home. Since 1947, it has been open to the public daily, free of charge. The home was given outright to the Foundation by the heirs of the Eisenhower estate.

Student Employment Service Offers Many Job Opportunities

By AL KLIMCKE

Need money? Think you might consider working (just a little bit) for it? Then the Student Employment Service is the place you're looking for. You'll find it's easier than you think to earn "those few more bucks till the check comes."

The Student Employment Service has job opportunities to fit almost any specialized skill a student may possess, and ones for those with no work experience at all. There are jobs ranging from general housework to art and modeling work.

To apply for one of these jobs, a student must first fill out an application at the employment office in Old Main. Data on this application includes type of job interested in, reason for seeking help, estimated amount of financial help needed, other jobs held, general data about the applicant, and a class schedule.

The Student Employment Service tries to place students as soon as possible, as jobs are phoned into the office every day. Most of these are odd jobs of short duration rather than permanent employment.

Once a student has filled out an application he is considered on the "active list". However, chances of finding a job will be better if the student checks daily with the office rather than waiting to be called, since there are usually more students desiring work than jobs available.

The main function of the program, Jack Huber, head of the employment service, said, is to help needy students.

If a student gets a steady job, or if his work load becomes too heavy or his circumstances change in some way so that he no longer needs work, his card is taken from the active file with the understanding that it may be reactivated any time the student wishes.

Most of the jobs which students apply for fall into eight general categories: housework, garden work, foods jobs, baby sitting, specialty work such as art or modeling, clerical work, technical work such as drafting or composing, and unclassified odd jobs.

In addition to these, the office supervises the student agencies such as dry cleaning, floral, Sunday news, daily news, and magazine. Last year these agencies grossed $22,748, of which the 61 students involved received $4080 in compensation.

Another facet of the employment service not generally known is the camp and resort service. The agency handles a listing of 213 camps with 1200 summer jobs available in 17 states. Last year 20 representatives of 42 camps interviewed students on campus.

Students' job skills also range much more widely than can be considered in the odd job category. Some unusual job requests the office has had include telephone installer, fingerprint analyst, glassblower, Japanese translator, and commercial pilot.

Various jobs in student dining halls are generally filled from a waiting list of students living off campus. These jobs are for men only.

Follow up cards are sent out to all employers after the students have completed their jobs, and 98 per cent of those asked were highly pleased by the students' work. Chief complaint of the other two per cent is of students not showing up for their jobs.

Think prospects for picking up those few more bucks are looking pretty bright about now? Well, you're right. But, if after all this, you still need money . . . better wait for the check.
