

Flight Active Duty Upped to Four Years

Students enrolled in Air Force Reserve Officers Training Corps who wish to become top rate pilots will have to sign a new four-year active duty contract, according to an unofficial announcement in the Nov. 6 edition of the Air Force Times.

Graduates of basic pilot school will not get advanced flying training and can expect to serve in ground-type and non-operational flying jobs for the duration of their short tours, the article reported.

Begins with 55G

The new arrangement begins with class 55G, which graduates in January. Men in this and subsequent classes will be asked to sign four-year contracts. If they agree, according to Air Force Times, they will enter advanced courses to become skilled in the latest jet aircraft and assume cockpit jobs.

Col. Daniel F. Riva, professor of Air Science, said that this new program benefited both the ROTC student and the Air Force.

A student now enrolled in AFROTC, explained Riva, has the opportunity to decide whether or not he wants to make the Air Force his career. If he decides to remain in the service after his required hitch is over, the extra training he receives as a result of the extended year's service will be of value to him, Riva said.

Not Obligated

If, on the other hand, Riva said, he is in the Air Force only to serve his required amount of time, he is not obligated to take specialized training, nor will he have to serve an extra year.

The new four-year active duty contract will benefit the Air Force, Riva continued, in that it will provide costly special training only for those young men interested in serving in the force for additional years.

The Air Force Times reported that officials declined to state how many basic graduates were expected to sign up for the longer period of active duty.

Appreciation Club in Jazz To Be Started

Do you enjoy and appreciate jazz? That is the only requirement for students to join a jazz appreciation club now forming on campus.

Theodore D. Richards, agriculture coordinator at the University for radio broadcasts throughout Pennsylvania, brought the idea for the club with him when he came here from Cornell. He acted as adviser to the Rhythm Club at Cornell, which was formed by students interested in jazz on the Ithaca campus.

The Rhythm Club was responsible for bringing Stan Kenton, Duke Ellington and Dave Brubeck to Cornell. The club made high fidelity tape recordings at jazz concerts held by visiting artists and later transposed them to 33 1/3 r.p.m. records which they sold to students. The group also sponsored informal "bull-sessions" with visiting jazzmen.

Richards played some of his Cornell tapes on Dan Grove's Grooveology 54 Sunday night over WMAJ, and made an appeal for members to form a nucleus for club activities. Students interested in jazz may contact either Ronald Hoopes or John Valentine at Pi Kappa Phi.

AFROTC Team Initiates 36

Thirty-six men were initiated into the Air Force Reserve Officer Training Corps Drill Team last Thursday night. Honorary memberships were conferred upon WO (j.g.) Jack Overstreet and Tech. Sgt. Jack Stemple, staff advisers to the Drill Team.

A formal pledge dinner dance will be held for the new members Jan. 14.

Campus Drivers Asked to Aid Traffic Survey

Students and faculty members were urged yesterday to cooperate with the traffic survey now being conducted on the campus by the Pennsylvania Department of Highways.

C. G. Reen, professor of civil engineering, said Ray Tean, engineer in charge of the survey, reported to him that campus drivers are ignoring the surveyors. Reen stated that he felt most drivers are unaware of the survey or fail to recognize its consequences.

Reen pointed out that the results of the survey are essential in forming plans for campus parking improvements.

The results of the survey, which will last for approximately two more weeks, will supplement figures compiled in a similar survey conducted by the Department of Civil Engineering in 1950.

The survey being conducted at the University is part of the survey requested by the borough of State College.

The state which has conducted similar studies in other places, is aided in its work by federal funds given to the state by the federal government for traffic research.

Dairy Club to Hear Faculty Panel Tonight

A panel discussion on "Bulk Milk Handling" will be held at the Dairy Science Club meeting at 7 tonight in 117 Dairy.

Ivan Parkin, professor of dairy extension, will be moderator of the panel. George Watrous, assistant professor of dairy manufacturing, Leroy Shearer, driver of the University milk tank-truck, and William Buchenhorst, local milk producer, will participate in the panel discussion.

Coeds Await Free Supply Of Tuna Fish

Last week was National Tuna Fish Week.

Mildred Kravitz, seventh semester journalism major, came across this news tidbit in Time magazine two weeks ago. Realizing her Phi Sigma Sigma sisters' stock of their favorite food was almost depleted, she decided that the Chicken-of-the-Sea Tuna Co. might be willing to replenish the sorority's cupboard in honor of the occasion.

"How easy it would be," she wrote to the California distributors of the company, "to make your sales zoom and my campaign of incorporating tuna fish into the diet of my sorority sisters a success, if a certain tuna fish company would send us a case to establish its product in the eyes of several coeds, the future homemakers of America." Below her signature she put her new title—Refreshment Chairman.

"We would like to give you the ammunition to make your campaign a success," was the answer she received from the advertising director. "You may be expecting a case of Chicken-of-the-Sea Tuna Fish."

The cupboards are almost bare. The Phi Sigma Sigma coeds are waiting anxiously for their Chicken-of-the-Sea.

Yule Display Designs Due

Designs for the annual Christmas lawn display in front of Old Main must be submitted before 5 p.m., Nov. 29 to the fourth floor lounge of Main Engineering, according to George Davis, president of Pi Gamma Alpha, fine arts honorary society.

The competition this year will be sponsored by Pi Gamma Alpha and prizes will be contributed by the All-University Cabinet, Davis said.

Awards of $15 first prize, and $10 second prize, will go to the individual students submitting the winning designs.

Drawings or models of the design may be entered and must clearly indicate the scale and dimensions, materials to be used, and the method of construction.

Cost of construction may not exceed $95. The actual construction of the display will be done by members of Pi Gamma Alpha.

Pitt Is Conducting 'Beat Penn State' Poster Contest

A poster contest titled "Beat Penn State" is being sponsored by the Student Congress Assemblies committee of the University of Pittsburgh, adding to the competitiveness of the coming football weekend. Both the faculty and student body at Pitt are competing in the contest.

A pep rally for the game will be held at 8 tonight in front of Recreation Hall, instead of last night as was erroneously reported in yesterday's Daily Collegian.

A torch parade by members of Parmi Nous, senior men's hat society, will highlight the rally. The parade will circulate throughout main campus and the dormitory areas.

Students will not be granted a half-holiday to attend the last football game of the Nittany Lions 1954 season. Saturday morning classes will be held as usual.
