city who the substitutes were to be.

The council discussed the possibility of the popular election of the officers of the council. At present the officers are nominated and elected by the councils, as is done in the other eight councils.

It was decided that the elections committee would investigate the pros and cons of the issue and report to the council. There are three possible methods to be considered by the committee: The present system of election within the council; the nomination by the council and the election by the students of the College of Agriculture; and nomination and election by the entire college.

It was decided by the council that the Coaly Society would meet to decide whether there would be a program this year to honor agriculture leaders. In the past few years this has been the purpose of Ag Hill Achievement Night.

Williams requested that each club appoint four students to go to the Farm Show in Harrisburg. The students have been asked to be in a pageant to represent the Penn State Centennial.

Williams also appointed the Farm Show Committee. The members are Daniel Van Dune, chairman, Joanne Moore, Beverly Patterson, James Brosius and Carl Flandermyer.

and Engineering Councils, several students, and faculty members of the department of agricultural engineering to discuss the representation problem.

Neither council has taken final action on the problem at present.

The council also voted to send a recommendation to the authorities of the College of Engineering library proposing that the library remain open until 11 each week night. The library now remains open until 10:30 p.m.
