

Students Involved in Car Crash

Three students escaped serious injury Thursday night when they were involved in an automobile pileup on S. Atherton street, near the community athletic field. The three were treated at the University Hospital and released yesterday.

The accident occurred at 11:45 p.m. Tuesday. Robert Jackson, graduate student in dairy science, slowed down his vehicle to make a left turn into a S. Atherton street service station when a car operated by Philip Stover, seventh semester mechanical engineering major, came up rapidly, striking the left rear of the Jackson car. Stover told borough police that he was attempting to pass Jackson when he suddenly saw an oncoming truck from the opposite direction. He said he then collided with Jackson's car.

For more than 60 feet the two cars skidded. Jackson's car then rolled over and came to a stop upside down. Jackson and Jasper Liotta, seventh semester commerce major, a passenger in the car, each made their way out of the car with minor injuries.

At the University Hospital, Jackson was released after first receiving attention for two slight bruises of the leg. Liotta was treated for an ankle bruise. Stover suffered from a cut on the thumb.

Damage to Stover's car was estimated at $1500 and the Jackson damage was estimated at $2000.

Office Probation Given To Six Men by Senate

Six students have been placed on office probation by the disciplinary subcommittee of the Senate Committee on Student Affairs.

Five of the six students had been recommended for disciplinary probation by the Association of Independent Men's Judicial Board of Review. The recommendation for office probation for the sixth student was upheld, despite the student's appeal. Four of the five whose penalties were lessened had appealed.

The four students who appealed the recommendation of disciplinary probation were involved in a shaving cream and water battle in McKee Hall during the Pitt-Penn State weekend.

During the subcommittee's review of the AIM recommendations the men admitted having taken part in the battle but said they felt the recommended penalty was too severe.

Placed on Transcript

A notation of disciplinary probation is placed on a student's permanent official transcript. It may not be removed until his eighth semester when he may petition the subcommittee to have it erased.

There is no transcript notation when a student is placed on office probation. However, a record of the action is kept in the dean of men's office, and, according to Assistant Dean of Men Harold W. Perkins, is taken into consideration if the student is involved in further disciplinary action.

The second case resulted from a line cutting fist fight in the Pollock dining hall lines the night of the dining hall Thanksgiving dinner. Both men involved were placed on office probation.

Sentence Reduced

The student who struck the student who had cut into line out of turn had been recommended for disciplinary probation. However, his sentence was reduced to one of office probation. According to Perkins, the subcommittee felt both students had an equal responsibility for the fight and both should be penalized equally.

The student who was struck appealed the recommendation of office probation, but the appeal was denied.

Britishers To Debate AT 8 Tonight

Two University debaters and two debaters from England's Oxford University will discuss the permanent exclusion of Communist China from the United Nations at 8 tonight in Schwab Auditorium.

Representing the University in the 20-year-old rivalry between Penn State and Oxford will be Benjamin Sinclair, seventh semester arts and letters major, and David Meckler, seventh semester pre-medical major. They will support the negative side of the topic, "Resolved: That the permanent exclusion of Communist China from the United Nations would be a negation of the purposes of that organization."

The British debaters, who will support the affirmative, are Derek Bloom and Peter Nannay Bailey Tapsell, both Conservatives.

Both sides will present a 15 minute constructive speech and a five to seven minute rebuttal.

Richard C. Mahoney, assistant to the dean of the College of Liberal Arts, will act as monitor in the non-decision meet.

Bloom and Tapsell will be at the University as part of a three-month tour of forty colleges and universities. The tour was arranged by the Institute of International Education in cooperation with the Speech Association of America.

Orientation Program Heard By LA Council

Liberal Arts Council Monday night heard three suggestions from Nancy Seiler, chairman of the Liberal Arts freshmen orientation committee, aimed at improving the orientation program of the college.

The suggestions included: a reading list explaining the significance of Liberal Arts, to be distributed either during the summer or after students arrive on campus; a series of three lectures; and a compulsory one-credit orientation class.

The council approved the idea of an orientation class and voted to incorporate the other two suggestions into this class. Details must still be worked out, however.

Council also approved a motion by Nancy Ward that the list of recommended readings be sent to freshmen before they arrive on campus so they will have an opportunity to read articles which may help them in their class work.

Watson Lesse, council president, appointed George Buckhout and Elizabeth Jones as co-chairmen of the Liberal Arts open house committee.

Rose Mazza was also appointed to replace Mary Lee Laufer on the Liberal Arts college evaluation committee.

Young GOP's To Go Hollywood

The film will be shown at 7 and 9 p.m. in 119 Osmond. Even Democrats may attend, providing they have the 20 cent toll. This charge, however, has been termed a "donation" by the Young GOP's. That's politics for you.
