University Research Will Go Into Dinner

"Please pass the Penn State potatoes."

Guests at the Pennsylvania Farm Show dinner, to be held Thursday evening in Harrisburg, will find themselves eating dishes that will be made from products developed through research at the University.

The tomato juice will be made from Keystone tomatoes,

Outing Club Hunters to Dine On Season Kill

The field and stream division of the Penn State Outing Club will hold a wild game banquet for all members of the club on Jan. 16 at the Stone Valley Forestry Cabin.

Meat for the full-course dinner will be taken from the club's frozen food locker, which was filled with game during hunting season by members of the field and stream division. Approximately 100 pounds of wild game will be used for the banquet.

The dinner is open to club members only. Square dancing will be held after the meal.

Reservations can be made Sunday at the Outing Club skating party at Beaver Dam or by calling Gordon McCartney at ADams 7-2602 after 6 p.m. or the recreation office, extension 2571. Members must sign up by Wednesday.

sin. His major lines of interest are sheep and animal breeding.

In his thirty years at Penn State, Henning said he enjoyed coaching the livestock judging teams as much as any other activity. This is evidenced by the bronze plaque in his office, presented to him by the 10 members of his last team.

a variety developed at the University. The main course of roast prime baby beef was raised by a high school future farmer from Erie. But it was fattened with a kind of ration developed at the University.

Botany's Mushrooms

The sauce for the beef will be made with mushrooms grown from an improved type of spawn that originated in the botany department.

The potatoes that are being passed and the potato buns will be made from spuds grown on the E. L. Nixon farm, near State College. The peas have "a good Penn State growing background," according to the Pennsylvania Cooperative Potato Growers Association, the Pennsylvania Farm Bureau Cooperative and the Pennsylvania Chain Store Council, the organizations sponsoring the dinner.

University's Cabbage

Cole slaw will be made from Penn State Ballhead cabbage. Baked apples will be from orchards that have followed the University's recommendations for pruning and spraying.

For dessert, the guests will eat ice cream moulded in bricks showing the Nittany Lion in relief and made from Penn State ice cream mix. A giant Penn State 100th birthday anniversary cake will top off the feast. It will be made from a rare recipe using flour made from Pennsylvania potatoes.

President Milton S. Eisenhower is scheduled to speak to approximately 300 guests attending the dinner.

Debate Ban Queries Net No Replies

No reply has been received to letters sent to the U.S. Military and Naval Academies asking their present position on the debate ban.

Letters were sent to the two schools by the Daily Collegian after it was learned that Army will permit cadets to debate the negative side of the controversial question, "Resolved: That the U.S. should extend diplomatic recognition to the Communist government of China."

The service academies, along with four Nebraska state teachers' colleges and several other colleges throughout the country, banned the topic last fall.

Ban Lifted

The report that Army had lifted the ban, reprinted from the Syracuse Daily Orange, did not give the reasons behind the removal or any outline of the cadets' plans. The letter sent to the Army debate team requested more definite information.

No word has been heard from Annapolis since the ban was originally announced. The letter sent to the Navy debate team asked if, in light of Army's action, the midshipmen would also enter debate tournaments to support the negative side only, or, if not, why not.

Against Government Policy
Army and Navy officials said that it would not be fitting for future officers publicly to speak against already established government policy. This thought was repeated and explained in a mimeographed statement from the Naval Academy commandant to all midshipmen.

The Nebraska school officials said that to allow the students to debate the affirmative side of the topic would be to allow them to preach Communist party line.

Directories Still on Sale

Student and faculty directories are still on sale in the basement of Willard.

Student directories are 50 cents and faculty directories are 35 cents.
