

Mazza to Replace VanTries on WSGA

Rose Mazza, fifth semester arts and letters major, last night was appointed to replace Nancy VanTries as Town Senator at the Women's Student Government Association Senate meeting. Miss VanTries will be graduated at the end of the semester.

Patricia Ellis, WSGA president, said that since it appeared the basic problem in revising the WSGA constitution was to determine whether the rules and regulations of WSGA should be included in the constitution or if a small document omitting rules and regulations would be better. Senate approved her suggestion to ask Dr. Harold J. O'Brien, assistant professor of speech, to explain to Senate the difference in these types of constitutions. Senate will then vote on the form it prefers, and ask the committee to revise the constitution to follow that form.

Eleanor Gwynn, seventh semester education major, was appointed chairman of a committee to draw up an election code for WSGA.

AWS Convention

Miss Ellis announced that the Association of Women Students convention will be held April 6 to 10 at the University of Kansas, Lawrence, Kansas. She asked the freshman senators to decide upon an exhibit to be sent to the convention.

Patricia Lehr, freshman senator, asked why only two 1 o'clock permissions are given for traveling each semester. Carolyn Cunningham, junior senator, said the question had been before WSGA before, and the explanation from the Dean of Women's office had been that the fall semester is the only time when more are needed. Helen Sidman, WSGA parliamentarian, said the administration would prefer to keep traveling at a minimum in bad weather to reduce the possibility of accidents.

Three Minute Grace

Nancy Ward, representing Judicial, said hostesses, especially in Atherton Hall, had expressed concern over the frequent use of the three-minute grace given for a 1 o'clock. Senate agreed that there is a problem in Atherton Hall, where only two offices, but four desks for women to sign in results in crowding the offices. Miss Ellis asked that Judicial re-interpret the meaning of the three-minute grace period, and send a suggestion concerning it to the rules committee.

Joanne Caruso, panhellenic representative, introduced Patricia McLoughlin who will replace her during the next eight weeks while she is student teaching.

Through the Looking Glass

with Gabbi

Hi gang! Or is it group? What's the difference—we're all in this mess together? So much talk about beards and Centennial—in case you have not heard, finals start next week, too! What are they—ask any hollow-eyed, emaciated senior—he'll know! But there's always time for diversion and for some relaxation and aestheticism (that word cost me $10; I must use it) at ETHELS, your distinctive gift store.

To remind and reminisce . . . A bulletin board to tack up old dance programs, fraternity pins, Marlon Brando pictures and to cover up the clean spot on your wall—and this one is Magnetic. No thumb tacks or pins, blocks of metal attach themselves to the board and hold all your souvenirs no matter how wide you open your window. Two sizes, and several colors, it's a neat way to classify your college collection of doo-dads.

And when things get too crowded . . . just like when all your relatives decide to visit you at one time—take down the outdated stuff (the ones turning yellow) like the last time you went to a house party without a housemother. Tuck all these memoirs in a scrapbook so handsome and neat, it can sit right along side Bill Shakespeare, proud as punch because of its leather binding. No messy strings to knot your patience or fingers cause the pages are permanent. Three sizes and monogrammed for a slight charge, it's a life time book!

Many cigarettes, but who's got a match? . . . could be a constant cry among smokers. Using the gas pilot can become somewhat dangerous and it's so easy to have a ready supply of matches on hand. Boxed in brilliant colors (monogrammed if you want) you'll have them for friends and self. Why don't you stop in today and see what else ETHELS has to offer. See you next semester!
