sov's remarks — obviously to be taken as a major statement of foreign policy — Western diplomats noted with particular interest that a ma. associated with the military had become the new premier. There was some speculation here that it meant a stronger role for the armed forces in Soviet internal and external affairs, even though Bulganin is not a career military man but an old Communist administrator.

Malenkov's confession of failure

Aspaturian --

High Policy

"The struggle for power involves not only personalities but high policy as well," Aspaturian said.

Khrushchev's supporters denounce the more passive policies of Malenkov as rotten and subversive and are publicly committed to a "gun for butter" policy.

"Whereas Malenkov's policy was based on the assumption that international tensions would be relaxed," Aspaturian pointed out, "Khrushchev's is based on the premise that they will be irritated."

Commends Policy

Aspaturian commended the Eisenhower administration's firm policy in Formosa by stating that the policy brought the crisis in the Kremlin to a head.

He stated that Malenkov urged caution in dealing with the Chinese communists whereas Khrushchev contends that the Soviet Union must back Red China to the hilt.

"Unless Malenkov is soon arrested and executed, which is quite likely," Aspaturian stated, "the crown rests uneasily on Khrushchev's head. He is now the sponsor of a highly unpopular program and if his policy fails his opponents will be ready to take quick action.

"My own view is that Khrushchev will not succeed and like Beria will eventually lose his head.

"The only real source of power in Russia is the Red Army apparently controlled by its marshalls and generals," he pointed out.

was read for him by Alexander Volkov, chairman of the Council of the Union, upper House of the Soviet. The resignation was adopted by a show of hands. Malenkov confessed "guilt" for the failure of agricultural policy when he was in charge of it—before the death of Joseph Stalin in March, 1953.

Reading Series Begins Today

Dr. Bruce Sutherland, professor of English literature, will open the eighteenth series of Wednesday readings at 4:15 p.m. today at the Pattee Library.

The series which starts today will continue every Wednesday until March 16th. It will be divided into two groups, Australian and Renaissance readings.

Today's readings by Dr. Sutherland will be or. convict literature of Australia. Other speakers in the Australian sequence will be Alan McLeod, assistant professor of speech, who will present tape recordings of Australians reading Australian poetry on Feb. 16; Mrs. Leslie Greenhill, who will read Australian short stories, on Feb. 23; and Dr. Sutherland, reading Canadian literature, on March 2.

Centennial--

About 3000 University alumni are expected to participate in the campus program through the telephone broadcast. These members of more than 50 alumni clubs in Pennsylvania and neighboring states, will hold dinners at the same time and listen to a full hour of the campus program via the "network."

Communities in which dinners will be held include Philadelphia, Pittsburgh, Harrisburg, Reading, Bethlehem, Altoona, Scranton, Johnstown, Emporium, West Chester, Ridgway, Erie, Indiana, Lancaster, New Castle, Allentown, Williamsport, Greenville, Norristown, Stroudsburg, Greensburg, York, Hazleton and Pottsville.

Louis H. Bell, director of Public Information, said yesterday that television stations WFBG, Altoona, and WGAL, Lancaster, will send crews up to record the ceremonies on film. The anniversary will also be covered by reporters from The Harrisburg Patriot, The Harrisburg News, The Philadelphia Inquirer, The Pittsburgh Press, the Associated Press, and the United Press.

were reported to be satisfactory.

Two cameras are being used in each of the rooms from which television is being transmitted.

Two television receivers are being used in the rooms where students are receiving instruction. The picture is transmitted directly from camera to receiver over coaxial cable.

The study at the University is being financed by a $43,845 grant from the Fund for the Advancement of Education of the Ford Foundation. The study will mark the first time a program of this type has been undertaken on such a large scale. Studies on the use of television for teaching have been conducted at other institutions, but only on a limited scale.
