

Three Students Are Disciplined

Disciplinary action was taken on three students yesterday, according to Harold W. Perkins, assistant dean of men.

Two of the students were involved in a fight on Jan. 19 and the other one was found cheating on a final examination last semester.

A fourth semester mechanical engineering major was given disciplinary probation for fighting with a fifth semester business administration major in the East Dormitory area, Perkins said. The fifth semester student was given board probation which requires him to report to the Association of Independent Men Judicial Board of Review at every meeting. The board will review his general behavior and release him from probation when it feels he has improved satisfactorily.

Activities Allowed

The fourth semester student who was given disciplinary probation will be allowed to continue to participate in extra-curricular activities, but he will not be permitted to hold office in any clubs or organizations or be chairman of any committees for one year.

He appeared before the AIM Judicial Board of Review last Thursday. After his case was reviewed the board recommended to the dean of men's office that he be placed on disciplinary probation. The dean of men's office accepted this recommendation and informed the student of the action.

'Punishment Not Fair'

The student said he felt that the punishment was not fair and he appealed the case yesterday to the Senate Committee on Student Affairs subcommittee on disciplinary action. The subcommittee upheld the dean of men's decision and the student was placed on disciplinary probation for one year.

Perkins said the student will be expected to show that he can act as a constructive citizen during his period of probation.

A sixth semester petroleum and natural gas major was given a deferred suspension after he was found cheating on a final examination. The student entered his instructor's office half an hour after the examination and copied some of the answers from the master exam onto his paper.

While grading the papers the instructor noticed that the student's answers did not follow logi-

Speech Contest Forms Ready

Applicants for the Paul R. Guldin Memorial Agriculture Speaking Contest may pick up application blanks and contest rules in 111 Agriculture, it was announced yesterday.

The preliminaries of the contest will be held on March 3. Each participant will deliver a 5-minute speech. Those selected for the finals will deliver a 10-minute speech before the Agriculture Student Council on March 8.

The contest is open to students enrolled in the College of Agriculture.

First prize in the contest will be a gold medal and $50, second prize will be a silver medal and $25, and third prize will be $15.

The deadline for applying is Feb. 24.

Deland Will Address Meteorological Society

Raymond Deland, meteorology assistant, and Albert Miller, meteorology instructor, will address the American Meteorological Society at 7:30 tonight in 121 Mineral Industries.

Deland will speak on meteorology in Australia and Miller will speak on meteorology in South America.

The meeting is open to the public.

Deland will be expected to show that he can act as a constructive citizen during his period of probation.

The actual sentence was suspension from the University, but it was deferred until June. If at the end of the semester the student is able to obtain, through the dean of his college, recommendation that he be continued as a student, he will be allowed to enroll in the fall at which time he will be placed on disciplinary probation.

Players' 'Children of Darkness' Has Wylie in Role of Strumpet

By JOE BEAU-SEIGNEUR

Wench, according to popular usage, means a racy woman; a strumpet. Wench, according to Ann Wylie, is the type of role any girl would like to play if she had the chance for "a limited time."

Miss Wylie, an eighth semester education major, will be playing this role for a limited time (six weekends) beginning at 8 p.m. tomorrow, on the Center Stage in the Temporary Union Building, when Players open Edwin Mayer's "Children of Darkness."

"Playing the role of Laetitia is really a treat," Miss Wylie said, "but heaven help me if people believe I'm living the part. Laetitia is a wench in the fullest sense of the word."

Noblemen and Poets

"Children of Darkness" is a tale of noblemen and poets imprisoned at Newgate Prison in England during the 1870's, who occupy a room in the house of the jailer by paying him money.

Kelly Yeaton, the director, has even imported a special perfume from New Orleans for the role of Laetitia, which is, incidentally, the only female role in the show," Miss Wylie continued. "The perfume has been imported principally because it is the type of perfume Laetitia would wear, and because it will be unidentifiable by the audience," she said.

Not a Newcomer

Miss Wylie is not exactly a newcomer to campus dramatics, having appeared in three Players' shows and also in Thespians' "Roberta," in which she played Sophie. Her first role was Lily Garland, the female lead, in "Twentieth Century" on the Schwab stage, and she appeared later that year in the "Lute Song" company.

Last year Miss Wylie played Marian in the arena-type production of "On Approval." "We even had a road-tour for the company," she said, "traveling to far-off Lancaster and Altoona for two performances."

Most Unusual Role

"My most unusual role," she replied to a question, "was that of Hagga in a thesis production of James Thurber's 'The Thirteen

Clocks" in the Little Theater of Old Main. I was the old woman who wept real jewels," she said.

The jewels were actually jelly beans which she kept in her pockets, and when she was supposed to cry she grabbed a handful, raised them to her eyes and let them fall.

"The children loved it," she said, "but I doubt if I'll ever win any prizes for that slight of hand."

Tickets are available for "Children of Darkness" for $1 at the Student Union desk in Old Main.
