Cagers to Test Colgate

Nittanies Ready for 'Big' Pair

Penn State puts its qualifications for a return to the National Collegiate basketball championships on the line tonight when it battles dangerous Colgate University at 8 p.m. in Hamilton, N.Y.

The Lions, resting on the brink of their second successive NCAA entrance, could pave the way for an at-large bid by topping the Maroon tonight or by whipping Syracuse in the second half of their two-day road trip tomorrow night. A double victory or even a split will enhance the Lions' chances considerably.

The Nittanies, who enter tonight's contest with an impressive 15-5 record, have won six games in a row and are high in the listings of possible entrants into the national tourney.

Their hopes for a follow-up victory over the Maroon lie mainly in the scoring abilities of center Jesse Arnelle, who should top the 2000 point career scoring mark tonight or tomorrow. The big pivot man has 1969 points, leaving only 31 to go.

Along with Arnelle, coach John Egli will send guards Ron Weidenhammer and Bob Hoffman, and forwards Earl Fields and Jim Blocker into action as the Nittanies seek to snap a five-year jinx on the Maroon court. The won-lost record in the 37-year-old rivalry stands at 20-18.

The Lions had little trouble whipping the New York club at Rec Hall earlier in the season, walking off with a 110-75 verdict. The story was about the same with Syracuse when the Orange made its annual appearance here. That one ended 107-89.

However, both teams have been hot and cold this season, and when they have been good, they have topped some of the best in this section of the country. Colgate dumped Cornell and was barely edged by Connecticut in recent last week after the Orange had play. The Maroon upset Syracuse whipped Holy Cross and Niagara in successive outings. Colgate owns a 10-8 record and Syracuse has a 6-10 tally.

The 10-man Lion squad left State College by private car yesterday afternoon. The party will move down state to Syracuse tomorrow morning.

Mat, Volleyball Entries Sought by IM Officials

The intramural wrestling tournament and volleyball league play opens up next month for fraternities and independents, IM officials announced yesterday. Deadline for entries is Thursday for volleyball and March 1 for wrestling.

The wrestling program opens on March 15 with matches taking place in Recreation Hall between 7 and 8:30 p.m. Bouts will consist of three two-minute periods. Overtime periods are not allowed.

An organization may enter one person for each weight, but former champions must wrestle one weight higher than the one in which they won their title. Unlimited champions cannot defend their titles.

Each team may have three alternates, and these contestants need not be in any specific weight class. They can wrestle as a substitute for regular entries in any weight.

Entry fee is 25 cents per man. Volleyball play will begin on March 8, with matches scheduled five nights a week and played between 7 and 9:30 p.m.

The round robin system of play will be used with leagues being made up of five or six teams. Each match will consist of the best two-of-three games.
