Pink Violet Becomes 'New Look' in Color

By MARY BOLICH Assistant Society Editor

While Christian Dior is remaking the woman's figure to give it that new H-line look, Elizabeth Arden has come up with a "new look" in face and hair changes. She interprets this look in terms of a flower, the Parma violet.

"Mademoiselle's" February issue says the fashion will last longer

"simply because it has more true beauty in its idea, which is to make a girl look all-girl, . . . feminine as any woman Renior painted in his pinkest days."

The emphasis of the "new look" is on the mouth, Miss Arden says. For the lips, a Parma Violet lipstick with a blued depth is used. For the rest of the face, softer flower tints: the powder, a rose-tinted cream; the rouge, a sheer hint for rounding the cheek; the eye shadow, a transparency of pearly green; and the lash and brow, a "light sweep" of gray-misted black.

While this "new look" is winning some praise by women, it would be more becoming on Elizabeth Taylor about to portray her latest role as an English princess.

As for the hair style, Miss Arden says it is much longer and there is more of it. To make the flower-girl look complete, she calls it the bud shape. There are no curls to be seen, only deep, wide waves, ending in curves like "opening petals." Girls, with spring not too far away, join mother nature and blossom out into a lovely flower.

While on the subject of hair have you thought of changing your shampoo lately? Well if you did, here is what you need.

The latest shampoo among the Hollywood set is champagne (the alcoholic beverage). As one motion picture producer put it, "It (champagne) gives the hair that soft, lustrous look, but what an awful way to consume champagnes."

Pink violet is the color this year. Not only in facial makeup but also in dress fashions and accessories. The beads your mother used to wear in the flapper days are the latest to come out in pink violet. Along with the beads are denim flats lined with violets, open toe and back shoes made of genuine lizard, gloves, sweaters and lingerie.

You can even smell like a violet. The makers of perfume and toilet water have also gone violet-crazy. And there are many varieties: the warm, deep ones, the delicately clear ones, the cool ones with the green leaves blended into their petals. As Mademoiselle says, girls, "you can smell like the fresh breath of spring."

While paging through Mademoiselle, we came across a "new look" in wedding rings, a squared circle. If you want to know how it looks on your finger, find the largest nut (the metal kind) you have at home and put it on your finger.

Tired of your hair style? Want to change it but find it isn't long enough? Then here is what you need. For those who like the page boy, there is a specially designed hairpiece measuring 5 inches that will give you that page boy whenever you want it. The hair is also available in curls. All you have to do is clip your new hair on to the old.

For those who wear glasses and want a change in eye appeal, there's a wardrobe of adjustable jeweled clips for your frames. You can get them in pearls or colored stones.
