Hort Group To Present Housing Exhibit

"The House that Penn State Built," an educational exhibit of a contemporary house, will be seen Monday at the opening of the Philadelphia Flower Show in Convention Hall.

The exhibit is the entry of about 50 members of the Horticulture Club at the University.

The students designed and pre-fabricated the house, and the finished product was transported to Philadelphia for the show.

The exhibit will feature a living terrace adjacent to a contemporary house 20 feet long.

Its terrace attractions will include a raised brick planting area, illuminated by a lightscope, and a two-level pool with the upper level flowing into the lower.

Across the rear of the exhibit will be a corrugated plastic fence designed to give privacy to the area.

On the committee which was responsible for the project were Willard Detweiler, chairman, Margaret Fleming, John Kennedy, Richard Schwoebel, Gerald Rupert, and James Park. All are eighth semester horticulture majors.

Brindley Will Head Department

Dr. George W. Brindley, research professor of mineral sciences, has been named head of the newly designated department of ceramic technology, which will become effective July 1.

Renaming of the department from ceramics to ceramic technology will more accurately reflect the character of the instructional and research program of the department, Dr. Elbert F. Osborn, dean of the College of Mineral Industries, explained.

Dr. Brindley, whose title has been changed to professor of solid state technology, will succeed Dr. Edward C. Henry who joined the University faculty in 1936.

Dr. Henry has been on a leave of absence since October 1, 1953 serving as a visiting scientist with the Ceramics Laboratories of General Electric Company. His leave will continue until Sept. 30, and in his absence, Floyd A. Hummel, associate professor of ceramics, has been serving as acting head of the department.

Dr. Brindley, who came to the University on July 1, 1953, from the University of Leeds, England, is a native of Newcastle-under-Lyme, England. He received his B.S. and M.S. degrees from the University of Manchester, and his Ph.D. degree from the University of Leeds.

Dr. Brindley's experience has been mainly in the field of X-ray diffraction analysis applied to diverse problems connected with both minerals and metals.

During World War II, Dr. Brindley began the new thermo-electric study of cold-worked metals, and also began a study of geology.

Following the war, his research turned to a detailed study of minerals, which dealt not only with pure crystal structure analysis, but also with the transformations which are produced by thermal and chemical treatments.

Music and Books

HUB Offers Culture To Student Body

Good reading material and good music are among the items that will be available to students when the Hetzel Union Building opens on Tuesday.

The reading room, with a fireplace at one end and floor-to-ceiling windows on one side, contains shelves for a wide variety of magazines.

Adjoining the reading room is the studio with seven listening booths, each of which is large enough to permit several persons to enjoy listening to records.

Three hundred long-play records will be available at the main desk of the building. Students will sign for the records. Members of Phi Mu Alpha, as a pledge class project, composed a cross-file of the recordings. This will be available at the main desk so that records may be selected by either the composer or by the name of the number.

All Types of Music Chosen

Dr. Hummel Fishburn, head of the departments of music and music education, selected the records. He said that they include symphonies, concertos, chamber music, piano music, violin music, operas, oratorios, vocal solos, show music, and jazz.

Dr. Fishburn explained "In making the selection, an effort was made to avoid recordings that are heard on juke boxes or are currently popular on radio broadcasts."

"We tried to select well-known music, the best music from all of the periods. Contemporary music as well as the classics is represented," Dr. Fishburn added.

Furnishings Are Modern

Furnishings in the two rooms are modern, like those in other sections of the building. In the reading rooms the chairs are upholstered in brown, gray, and coral while white drapes with a charcoal design of lines are used.

Listening booths off the studio are finished in red and gray while chairs in the room are done in dark blue and black and white tweed.

The studio also contains a grand piano and will be available for small musical recitals as well as other events.
