

Graduate Newsletter To Continue

Graduate Student Council voted Wednesday night to continue publication of the Graduate Newsletter, official publication of the council.

Charles Petrie, editor of the Graduate Newsletter, made a motion that the publication be discontinued because he felt that there was a lack of interest and cooperation on the paper. The motion was defeated.

The council decided that suggestions for improvement of the newsletter be considered.

An amendment to the Graduate Student Association constitution which would change the quorum requirement for a meeting was also considered. The amendment, if passed, would change the quorum requirement to a majority of the council. The quorum rule now in effect requires that a majority of the council and a representative from all but one of the University colleges must be present for a meeting to conduct official business.

The council tabled the proposed amendment until the next meeting.

The Penn State Book Exchange, which will open in the HUB Tuesday, will have many of the former lines it carried enlarged. It will provide a complete line of school supplies and stationery.

A pamphlet giving the history of the HUB, a short description of each of the rooms, and a floor plan for each of the floors is available at the HUB desk.

The HUB, which will open Tuesday, will remain open while classes are in session during the regular academic year.

counseling systems of the various schools. That is, the student still sees the adviser whom he was assigned when he entered the University.

Our hypothetical student carries the same number of credits, approximately 17, as do other University students. At the end of a successful semester in which he has either completed the required courses and or has pulled up his All-University average, he is again enrolled in one of the colleges. (If a student, however, does not make the necessary average after two semesters in DIR, he is dismissed from the University.)

A few weeks after the new semester has begun, our student receives a letter from DIR congratulating him on his accomplishment. His parents receive a similar letter. The student not only deserves this gesture, Wilson said, but it creates good will for the division and for the University.

The division, which began in 1949 as a two-year experiment, has graduated about 40 per cent of its students. Wilson credits this partly to the counseling service. Last semester, there were six DIR students on Deans' Lists.

Spring Weather To Continue

The pleasant weather that has been present on campus for the last two days is expected to continue today, according to the University weather station.

Yesterday's high mercury reading was a shirt-sleeve 68 degrees, three degrees higher than Wednesday's high reading. Today's high is expected to be 65.

The station forecast the possibility of showers for late night or early this morning but reported that the skies should clear up about mid-morning.

Yesterday's low was 50, while the expected low for today is 53.

Mayer Press to Publish Faculty Member's Book

A book of poems and translations "Time of Hawks," by Joseph Leonard Grucci, assistant professor of English composition, will be published Tuesday by the Mayer Press, Pittsburgh.

Born in Pittsburgh, Grucci attended the University of Alabama, Penn State, and the University of Pittsburgh. His first book is entitled, "Lovers of Earth."

Nittany-Pollock Ball-Playing Restricted to Specific Areas

Students in the Nittany-Pollock dormitory area will not be allowed to play baseball near their dorms, Otto E. Mueller, director of housing, has announced. Students who wish to play ball will have to do so in the play areas assigned to the sport, he said.

In accordance with the University regulation banning ball playing on dormitory grounds, University staff members and dormitory counselors have been instructed to break up all games outside the dorms, and send the students to the special areas, Mueller said.

Students are reminded that playing ball in the dorm areas may lead to broken windows, injuries by bystanders, or torn up grass, Mueller said. The fiber-slate sides of some of the Nittany-

Pollock dorms are also vulnerable to hard-driven balls, he said. Areas that may be used for ball-playing are the intramural fields near the skating rink, and the ground between Pollock dormitories and College avenue.
