Care Is Necessary For Neat Hairdos

By MARCIE McDONALD

Collegian Society Editor

The spring monsoon season will be starting very soon, the season of wind and rain and droopy hairdos. You can't do anything about the weather, except talk, but you can do something about the droopiness of your crowning glory.

For instance, if you are following Dame Fashion and growing your own bud shape, a good permanent is the best insurance against

UCA to Hold Square Dance

The University Christian Association will hold a square dance from 7 to 9 p.m. Tuesday in the main ballroom of the Hetzel Union Building.

Donald Kaelin, ninth semester dairy science major, will be caller for the dance. The Nittany Valley Boys, a three-piece square dance orchestra, will play.

Kevin Gelderman, sixth semester business administration major and a member of the Square and Folk Dance Leaders of the Delaware Valley, will lead a 15-minute instruction period preceding the dance. Gelderman will teach the basic steps and techniques of folk and square dancing.

The square dance is open to the public. UCA plans to hold a folk and square dance every Tuesday in the HUB.

the initial enemy of losing all the curl on rainy days. By a good permanent no longer is meant, necessarily, an expensive salon wave. A home permanent, properly given and cared for, can give excellent results.

To get the most out of your home permanent, start out with a good professional hair cut. Many people have the idea that getting a hair cut after a permanent will result in a softer wave; it is far better to start with the haircut and regulate the wave you want by the type of permanent you use.

Of the many, many home permanents now on the market there are undoubtedly several that will give you a wave well suited to your hair. There are generally two types of permanents, the rod curl and the pin curl types. You can tell whether your hair curls easily or not by the way it reacts to pin curls; if it tends to wave slowly and lose the wave fast, chances are the rod type permanent is for you.

And the reverse is also true. If your hair curls easily, the pin curl permanent will give you just enough wave to give body and lasting wave to your hair.

There is no excuse for "missing" in giving yourself a home permanent, since all brands include very complete and explicit directions. Follow them carefully, especially that first section dealing with test curls. The quality of your hair changes from season to season and you won't always get the same results from the same permanent. So play it safe and test first.

The timing of your permanent is the second important factor. Don't guess; remember the results of your test, and watch the clock! Over-waving will give you too much curl and will dry out your hair.

Some permanents have a separate neutralizing process; others are self-neutralizing. Make sure you know just what the permanent you are using does.

If you take the time and patience to do it carefully, your home permanent will last anywhere from six weeks to six months, depending on the type you've used and your hair. Let the showers drench the Nittany vale; you're ready for anything with the natural look that stays that way.

Spotlighting Delta Gamma

By GINGER HANCE

Alpha Chi, local chapter of Delta Gamma, is celebrating its 25th anniversary on campus today. The DG's first came to the University campus in 1930.

Nationally, Delta Gamma was established in 1873 at the Lewis School in Oxford, Mississippi. At present there are 80 sorority chapters.

The DG suite is located on the first floor of Simmons Hall. Miss Jane Cowell is adviser to the fifty girls, four of which are new ribbons.

The sorority will help to celebrate its anniversary at its formal Founder's Day banquet, 6:15 tonight at the State College Hotel. Twenty-five of the 90 expected guests are members of the original campus chapter.

New officers of Alpha Chi chapter will be presented tonight at the banquet. They are Joan Gray, president; Nancy Gulick, vice president and pledge trainer; Julie Mayberry, assistant vice president; Sandra Dahlinger, recording secretary; Margaret Sensenig, corresponding secretary; Elizabeth Morrill, treasurer.

The Delta Gamma's project is reading to blind students on campus. The women take turns reading to three students as part of their support of the sight conservation and aid to the blind program. Recently, Telebinocular Schools have developed a new instrument which is named after the school. The telebinocular tests eyesight more accurately than the older 'E' or Snellen tests. Delta Gamma alums administer these tests in schools with the approval of the school administration. The DG's also give financial support to the school.

In May, the chapter will be host to the five chapters in its province. It will honor the other chapters at a banquet in the Hetzel Union Building.

Each semester a scholarship cup is awarded to the sister making the greatest improvement in her grades. There is also a scholarship cup for the pledge achieving the highest average.

There are 13 DG's in hat societies. The Delta Gamma's many active women on campus include Women's Student Government Association president, Patricia Ellis; senior class secretary-treasurer, Faith Gallagher; Panhellenic Council recording secretary and Mortar Board treasurer, Polly Moore; and Panhel treasurer, Joan Flinn.
