

Pre-Initiation Code Amendments Passed By IFC Presidents

Two amendments to the proposed pre-initiation practices code were passed by fraternity presidents at a special meeting of Interfraternity Council held Sunday night.

The amendments were:

1. In regard to pre-initiation practices, no requirement shall be made of pledges outside of the fraternity house or off the grounds which will be of such a character as to prove detrimental to the fraternity system.

This amendment replaced part two of the original code which stated that all pre-initiation practices be restricted solely within each fraternity house, excluding "Help Week" practices.

Amended for Clarification

The group felt the amendment was necessary to clarify the intent of the original wording, since there was some question as to whether activities such as pledge trips would be allowed.

2. A minimum of eight hours a day be provided for the purpose of sleep and/or study during periods of intensive periods of pre-initiation practices.

The amendment replaced part four of the original code which stipulated that a minimum of five hours for sleeping and three hours for studying be allotted each day during periods of intensive pre-initiation practices.

The amendment was made so that the eight hours of free time could be allotted while leaving the division of time between studying and sleeping up to individual fraternities and pledges.

Original Code Tabled

The amended code will be presented to the regular meeting of IFC next Monday. The original code was presented at the last meeting, but was tabled so that representatives could discuss the matter with their individual fraternities.

Carpenter told the presidents that neither IFC nor the administration is attempting to interfere with fraternity activities. He said the object of the code is to form a working basis to curb what he termed unnecessary pre-initiation practices which are harming fraternity public relations.

"We hope that those people who are in position of authority will consider the fire hazards of Engineering A, B, and C worthy of future consideration. We, the students, wait while you people of authority gamble with our lives for another month."

Some minor work remains unfinished as yet, however. Areas except the card room, television viewing room, and photographic dark rooms will be in full operation starting today.

Breakfast will be served this morning in the Lion's Den (snack bar). Over 200 students visited the Lion's Den both Thursday and Friday during the trial period.

Over 18,000 visitors were present yesterday when the HUB opened from 1:30 to 5:30 p.m.

Miss Baker said service would be fastest during the early and late parts of the serving periods. She hopes that the students will utilize the full serving time rather than overcrowding one period.

"There's so much room that everyone will finally be able to find a table," Paul Plaia, fourth semester mechanical engineering major, said.

Visitor Likes HUB Too

Mrs. Evelyn Powell, a campus visitor from Wellsville, N.Y., expressed satisfaction with the HUB ballroom. "The building itself is on equal par," she said, "and I feel it is certainly worth the $7.50 a semester we parents are paying," she said.

Donald Olexa, sixth semester chemical engineering major, was found sprawled out in one of the chairs in the reading room. "I'm tired from walking," he said. "This place is really huge."

Office Space Criticized

One of the students interviewed questioned the justification of almost total office space on the second floor of the HUB. Joseph Mazurkiewicz, graduate student in psychology, said, "I seriously wonder if all the office space is warranted—it seems to me that the HUB is for administrative purposes more than anything."
