

Pollock Council Postpones Vote On Constitution

Pollock Council last night postponed voting on the Association of Independent Men constitution until the next meeting.

The council had approved the AIM constitution as amended (not giving the president veto power) at its last meeting.

However, at the last AIM meeting, it was decided to leave the veto power clause in the constitution.

Harry Martini, council president, made the following appointments:

Nelson Seidel, public welfare committee chairman; Edward Farady, projects committee chairman; Clarence Getty social committee chairman; Ronald Urick, council parliamentary; Austin Polley, area fire marshal; and Edwin Pierce, All-University Cabinet Food Committee representative.

The council voted a $35 appropriation to AIM to be used in paying the expenses of two delegates to the National Independent Student Association convention in Colorado. The convention will be held some time in May.

He was a delegate to UNESCO conferences in Paris in 1946; Mexico City, 1947; Beirut, Syria, 1947; and again in Paris in 1947. These positions were designated by presidential appointment.

Council to Scotland
Dr. Eisenhower began his governmental career as this country's vice consul to Scotland from 1924 to 1926. He served as Assistant to the Secretary of Agriculture, from 1926 to 1928, and held positions in the department until 1942.

In 1942 he became associate director of the Office of War Information until his appointment as president of Kansas State College in 1943. In 1950, Dr. Eisenhower was named president of the University.

First Blast Since Censure
McCarthy's speech yesterday was his first major strike against the administration's foreign policy since he was censured by the Senate on Dec. 2.

The effect of the speech probably will be to widen—if this is possible—the split between the Chief Executive and the Senator.

McCarthy has been the most vocal critic of the foreign policy of the United States during the administrations of Presidents Harry S. Truman and Eisenhower.

Details Unavailable
Details of any specific charges against Dr. Eisenhower by McCarthy were not available last night. In his speech McCarthy called upon President Eisenhower to repudiate the Yalta agreements. The texts of the agreements were released last night by the State Department.

"I recommend to the President of the United States," McCarthy said, "that he reread his campaign speeches of 1952—and those

The constitution and list of charter members was submitted to the Senate Committee on Student Affairs subcommittee on organization control for approval.

If the subcommittee gives its approval, local circle Omicron Kappa will apply for national affiliation in April or May.

Junior and senior men who are scholastically in the upper 35 percent of the men in their college and who are outstanding in one field of student life or a leader in two or more fields, are eligible for membership. They are screened on the basis of character, campus service and leadership, and their adherence to democratic ideals.

The five major fields of student life, according to ODK, are student government, social and religious affairs, scholarship, publications, forensic and applied arts and athletics.

The movement to establish an ODK circle at the University was started in September by Benjamin Sinclair, eighth semester arts and letters major.

Dr. Robert Bishop, national secretary of ODK, was at the University in February to answer questions about the national organization and to help the organizational committee write a constitution.
