

Hagerty Slated For Seminar

James C. Hagerty, press secretary to President Dwight D. Eisenhower, will participate in the annual two-day press seminar which will be held March 31 and April 1 at the Nittany Lion Inn.

Hagerty will speak on "The Future Responsibility of the Press" to some 50 Pennsylvania newspaper editors and national dignitaries who will attend the seminar on "Press Responsibility."

The seminar is sponsored jointly by the Pennsylvania Society of Newspaper Editors and the University. Dr. Robert E. Clark, acting head of the Department of Sociology, will serve as chairman of the discussions.

Will Discuss Reporting Problems

The assembly of newsmen and educators will discuss the problems connected with reporting social problems and sordid news, hear a panel of typical newspaper readers speak on what they want to read in their newspapers, and discuss the need for interpretation of news at all levels.

Newsmen who will speak at the seminar are Robert H. Estabrook, editorial page director of the Washington Post and Times-Herald; James H. Driscoll, editor of the Connellsville Courier; Jerome Weinstein, president of the PSNE and editor of the Centre Daily Times; Oxie Reichler, editor of the Yonkers, N.Y., Herald Statesman; and Hagerty.

Faculty to Participate

Members of the faculty who will address the conference are Dr. Ben Euwema, dean of the College of the Liberal Arts; Edward Abramson, assistant professor of sociology; Adrian O. Morse, University provost; and Clark.

A group of 10 Latin-American journalists, publicists, political editors and writers, and radio and television commentators will attend the closing dinner at which Hagerty will speak.

The 10 newsmen are one of the three Latin-American groups touring the United States for a 30-day period to view recent industrial, military, agricultural, and general developments and to participate in cultural and social activities.

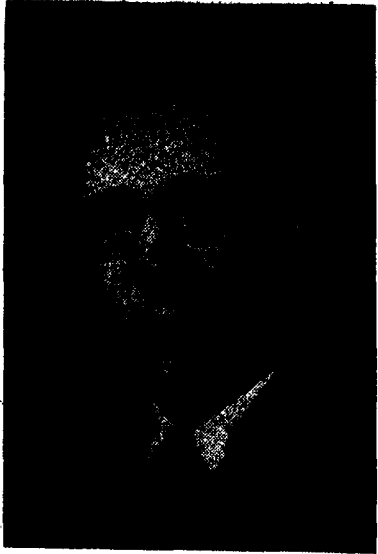

State Department Tour

The tour is sponsored by the State Department and will end with the visit to the seminar and the University.

Others who will participate in the seminar are Judge Leonard M. Propper of the Municipal Court of Philadelphia, James Marlow of the Washington, D.C., Associated Press Bureau, Dr. William G. Mather, professor of sociology, Edward J. Donahue, city editor of the Scranton Times, Herman S. Reifsnnyder, vice president of the PSNE and editor of the Altoona Mirror, State Senator George B. Stevenson of Lock Haven, and Dr. Robert G. Bernreuter, professor of psychology and director of the psychology clinic.

Fan Motor Burns Out

A motor on a ventilator fan in the basement of Phi Sigma Delta burned out Saturday night. An alarm was answered by the Alpha Fire Company, although only the motor was damaged.

IFC Defeats Code, Approves Constitution, Receives Nominations

In three-fold action last night, Interfraternity Council:

1. Defeated the proposed pre-initiations code by a vote of 25 to 22 with 2 abstentions.
2. Unanimously approved the amended IFC constitution.
3. Heard final nominations for IFC officers for the coming year.

The pre-initiations practices code was defeated with little discussion. The code included five provisions:

1. That the IFC establish a standing committee to investigate all complaints arising from pre-initiation practices.

2. In regard to pre-initiation practices, no requirement shall be made of pledges outside of the fraternity house or off the grounds which will be of such a character as to prove detrimental to the fraternity system.

3. That the term Help Week be substituted in place of the term Hell Week in all written documents.

4. That a minimum of eight hours a day be provided for the purpose of sleep and/or study during periods of intensive pre-initiation practices.

5. That resolutions two through four be incorporated into a permanent pre-initiations practice code.

Those who spoke against the code felt the wording was too general and would allow too strict interpretation by IFC in the future. They also felt passage of the code would set a precedent for IFC to interfere in the internal affairs of individual houses. Both John Carpenter, IFC president, and John McMeekin, chairman of the committee which drew up the code, expressed disappointment at its defeat.

The major change in the new IFC constitution provides for the establishment of a fraternity affairs office in the Hetzel Union Building. This office would act as a coordinator for IFC activities.

Before it is official, the constitution must be submitted to the Senate Committee on Student Affairs.

The candidates for IFC offices for the coming year include:

Donovan Says HUB Will Not Affect Grades

The new Hetzel Union Building will not affect student's scholastic averages, according to George L. Donovan, director of associated student affairs.

Donovan said it is "entirely up to the student himself." He said there have always been many diversions for students on and near campus, and that the HUB will not entice students to spend less time studying than they did before.

The building has as its purpose also to improve faculty-student relationships, Donovan said. Not only does the HUB provide facilities for students, but it also provides very adequate faculty facilities.

Donovan said that the University cannot force students to study, but that it is entirely up to the individual. The students that are not capable of completing their course are scholastically eliminated.

The HUB does not supply a check service as such, although checks may be cashed when purchases are made, Donovan said. He added that a University town is often troubled with faked checks.

Donovan announced that the music listening rooms have been constantly crowded with students who have been bringing their own records. Phi Mu Alpha, men's national music honorary fraternity, is organizing permanent record files, and should be finished by the end of this week, Donovan said.

Nautilus Cruise Impresses A-Group

GROTON, Conn., March 21 (AP)—Congressional Atomic Energy Committee members returned from an all-night cruise aboard the nuclear-powered submarine Nautilus today and reported that they were "impressed" by her performance and "enthusiastic" about what they saw.

One of the members, Sen. John

O. Pastore (D.-R.I.), said the committee "was strongly impressed with the performance to the point of excitement." The speed was "terrific," he stressed.

Another member, Rep. Melvin Price (D.-Ill.) said the Nautilus heralds a revolution in every aspect of naval warfare because her speed and endurance "out-modes all previous concepts of undersea and surface tactics and strategy."

The entire committee, in a prepared statement handed newsmen who greeted it at the General Dynamics Corp. dock here, predicted that, "The development of atomic powered submarines will radically change naval strategy and tactics."

They said, "The Nautilus is the only submarine in the world that can completely circle the globe at full speed submerged," and commended Rear Adm. Hyman G. Rickover "for his foresight and follow-through" and the person to whom "more than any others, the success of the Nautilus is due."

Rickover was one of two admirals who accompanied the 12 congressmen on the cruise and has been credited with having been highly instrumental in the construction of the world's first atom-powered submarine.

Rear Adm. Frank T. Watkins, commander of the Atlantic Submarine Force, the other admiral aboard, said that a tentative date has been set for officially turning the Nautilus over to him, but he couldn't say anymore about it today.

The 300-foot A-sub went to sea for her first trials under atomic power last Jan. 17.
