Freshman Class Plans For Dance

Freshman students may obtain free tickets for the Freshman Centennial Dance on Saturday at the Student Union desk in the Hetzel Union Building, Arthur Schraevesande, freshman class president, told a class meeting last night. Twenty freshmen attended the meeting.

The students must present their matriculation cards for the tickets, he said.

The Melody Men will provide the music for the dance, which will be held from 9 to midnight in the HUB ballroom.

Schraevesande emphasized that the dance will be informal, adding that many students apparently believe it will be a semi-formal affair because several incorrect posters were published.

Queen of the dance will be selected from nine candidates.

The candidates and their sponsors are RoseAnn Gonzales, Pollock 4; Ardrey Gilbert, McKee 1; Diane Ola, McKee 3; Marjorie Morris, Nittany 21; Patricia Lehr, Nittany 36; Anne Nitrauer, Hamilton 4; Marilyn Grant, Nittany 37; Diane Mather, Hamilton 7; and Hildah McKnight, Nittany 23.

On the judging committee are Wilmer E. Kenworthy, director of student affairs, Pearl O. Weston, dean of women, and Frank J. Simes, dean of men.

Also discussed at the business meeting was the possibility of holding a talent show or a freshman farewell mixer. No definite plans were decided upon.

Christy to Play At TIM Dance

Lynn Christy and his Campuseers will play at the annual Spring Dance of Town Independent Men from 9 p.m. to midnight April 2, in the Hetzel Union ballroom.

Christy provided the musical background for the Miss Penn State coronation during Spring Week 1954, and also played at the Dink Debut last semester.

The semi-formal dance, first big social affair to be sponsored by TIM, will coincide with the IFC-Panhel Ball weekend. Marvin Bollman, TIM social committee chairman, has announced there will be no admission charge, but the dance will be open to couples only.

Marine Plan Offers Students Opportunity for Commissions

College men who are looking to the Armed Forces for a career might well investigate the program set up by the United States Marines.

Although the University does not sponsor a Marine Reserve Officer Training Corps program on the same level as the Army, Air Force, and Navy, it does provide students with the opportunity to be trained as officers in the Marines.

The Marine plan is unique in that it does not require a student to be enrolled in classes during his junior and senior years in order to be commissioned as a second lieutenant, according to Capt. William F. Saunders, assistant professor of naval science.

Sophomores may enroll with the Marines in the Platoon Leader Class, attend summer camp for two years, and be guaranteed a commission upon graduation.

Students are draft-exempt.

Saunders said, while they are participating in this plan.

College seniors or recent graduates may enroll in the Officer Candidate Course, through which they receive their pre-commissioned training in one continuous ten-week session at Quantico, Va.

Both courses were set up for students who desire to complete their college education without attending military classes or drills during the academic year. This, of course, does not remove the land-grant institution requirement of compulsory military training at the University. For example, a student may be enrolled in regular Army ROTC for two years, attend the Marine Corps summer training sessions for two summers, and receive his commission without having to attend any ROTC classes during his junior and senior years.

Further information may be obtained from Saunders, in 201 Engineering E.
