Coed Voting Delays AA Race Results

By PHYLLIS PROPERT

Athletic Association Election results have not been released by the All-University Elections Committee because of votes cast by women in violation of the association's constitution.

Ernest Famous, chairman of the All-University Elections Committee, said last night it will be up to the association to decide whether to release the results or to hold another election. The committee knew, he said, that only male students had voted in the past for the AA officers but that it hadn't been aware that there was a specific clause in the AA constitution which limited the voting to male students.

Machines Couldn't Be Jammed
Famous said the equipment necessary to "jam" the four voting machines to restrict the voting was not available because the men who had brought the machines hadn't known that it would be needed.

Ronald Weidenhammer, president of the Athletic Association, could not be reached for a statement.

Candidates for AA president

BULLETIN

Ronald Weidenhammer, Athletic Association president, said late last night that another election may have to be held if the vote in Wednesday and yesterday's race for AA president was close.

Some women students cast ballots in the AA election. According to the association's constitution, only men are eligible to vote.

Weidenhammer said he would confer with Harold R. Gilbert, assistant director of athletics, when he returns from the National Collegiate Athletic Association boxing championships at Idaho State College. Gilbert is expected to return early next week.

are Robert Hoffman, Douglas Moorhead, and William Straub. Ian Springer is the only candidate for AA secretary-treasurer.

Lion Party Fined

The only fine imposed by the committee was against the Lion party which was fined $5 out of its $25 bond for turning its platform in two days late. It had been warned of the deadline, Famous said, but had failed to submit its platform in written form on the designated date.

However, he said, David Scott, vice clique chairman of the Lion party, had appeared before the committee and had presented the platform in oral form. Scott said it was a "general slip-up on the part of the party." He felt that the adverse publicity that the party received was sufficient punishment without the additional penalty of a fine.

Publicity Issue Raised

Scott suggested that in the future all decisions of the Elections Committee be in writing so that no confusion would result between the parties and the committee.

A question was raised about whether the Lion party senior

Thespians Present 'Rainbow'

By JOE BEAU-SEIGNEUR

endless crowds of happy people bounced out from the wings onto the Schwab stage last night, spreading joy, along with music and laughter, throughout the set and the audience.

Last night's performance of "Finian's Rainbow" proved the musical comedy to be the best choice Thespians have made in several years. Schwab audiences, which have seen everything from potted palms to child-murder this year, were never so much at home. The show had to be stopped in several places to permit the deserving applause to die out. Outstanding are the choreography and musical arrangements. The singing chorus is the happiest group that could ever be assembled, singing with apparent delight for the audience's pleasure.

Music Good—Anyway
Mike Rosenfeld has done an excellent job in staging the musical numbers, and he has beautiful orchestrations for the overture; even the unhappy orchestra, the only regrettable thing in the show, can't completely ruin them. Thespians may be a student organization, with little help from others than undergraduates, but making such agony out of music is unexcusable—professional musicians should be hired if no other solution is available.

Choreography Polished
The choreography is, as it should be, a major feather in Charlotte Fink's bonnet. Miss Fink can buy two bonnets for this writer's money—the dancing is the most professional thing in the show. Phoebe English, as Susan, is a polished dancer; her rendition of her own "Dance of the Golden Crock" stopped the show. Practice by the rest of the dancers

Third Party Shines In Political Debut

By MIKE MILLER

Campus party made a smashing debut in the University political arena yesterday as its candidates swept to victory in all nine of the All-University and class offices. The total victory is unprecedented in modern campus political annals.

Only 3679 of the 9984 eligible students, a percentage of 37.7, cast their ballots. A 50 per cent voting goal had been set by the All-University Elections Committee.

Earl Seely, the winning All-University presidential candidate, led his slate to the victory as he trounced his nearest rival, Rudolph Lutter, Lion party, by a decisive 1775-1196 margin. John Leasure, State party, trailed with 708 votes.

Robert Sturdevant and Philip Beard, Seely's running partners in the All-University race, won the vice president and secretary-treasurer's post also by decisive margins.

Sturdevant piled up the biggest margin of the election, leading his nearest opponent, Dean Belt, State party, by 666 votes as he totaled 1655 ballots. Stuart Horn, Lion party, was third with 969 votes.

Beard Wins Easily

Beard also rode to an easy victory, piling up 1529 votes against an 1117 total for Richard Seng, Lion, and 958 for Peter Bond, State.

The winning senior class candidates were Robert McMillan, president; William Rohm, vice president; and Ann Lederman, secretary-treasurer.

Only 995 juniors of the 2501 eligible voted in the senior class elections.

McMillan Totals 411

McMillan totaled 411 votes to 292 for both Terry Hunter, Lion, and John Lyon, State, in winning the senior class presidency. In the closest race of the election, Rohm nosed out John Riggs, Lion, for the senior class vice presidency by a 362-341 margin. Roger Vogel-singer, State, received 283 votes. Miss Lederman far outdistanced her rivals for the senior class secretary-treasurer's post as she received 497 votes to 287 for Martha McDonald, State, and 241 for Renna Cramer, Lion.

Campus party placed Robert Bahrnburg, president; Daniel Land, vice president; and Sue Loux, secretary-treasurer, in the junior class offices.

Bahrnburg Tops Richards

Bahrnburg received 442 votes to top Leonard Richards' 395 and Lash Howes' 245 ballots. Land moved into the vice president's slot with a 188-vote over William Snyder and Roy Walker. Walker received 300 votes and Snyder 294. Miss Loux won the junior class secretary-treasurer position easily, receiving 478 votes to 356 for Joanne Fulton, State, and 257 for Dorothy Glading, Lion.

Because women were discovered to be voting in the election of Athletic Association officers, the Elections committee declined to tabulate results of that election

4 Mobilization Posts Available

Four Mobilization Day positions with the department of air science and tactics are available for faculty members who hold commissions in the Air Force.

In case of hostilities, members of the department will be mobilized for immediate military action. This will require their replacement at the University, Capt. Howard O'Neal, assistant professor of air science, said.

Commissioned faculty members wishing to fill positions in the grade of lieutenant colonel, major, captain, and lieutenant may contact Captain O'Neal.

Below Grades Due

Mid-semester below grades are due at noon tomorrow in the offices of the deans.

4 Eyes Kept On Machines In Elections

Two men who looked somewhat like secret service men stood guard yesterday by the voting machines near the recreation room of the Hetzel Union Building.

They were not members of the secret service, however, but employees of the Shoup Voting Machine Corporation. Leroy Bradford of Florida and Webb Chenil-worth of Philadelphia were there to check on the operation of the machines.

Bradford said living in Florida was no hindrance to his job. The company, whose office is in Philadelphia, sends men to different parts of the country wherever voting machines are to be used.

He said the company estimates that half of the country now votes by pulling a lever on election day.

All-University Elections Committee members, recalling their ballot counting sessions which have lasted from early evening to after 1 a.m. on election night, were grateful for the machines.

The vote was tallied within 10

ers also showed its dividends in the show.

The best single scene, combining song, dance and comedy delightfully, was the rendition of "Necessity" by the girls' chorus. The audience seemed equally appreciable with the singing of "That Great Come-and-Get-It Day" by Mike McKay and the chorus.

Og Leaps

Ed Grove, as Og the leprechaun, snapped up the audience in his palm with his first arch-breaking leap onto the stage and later stopped the show with his singing of "When I'm Not Near the Girl I Love." His voice is one of the chief delights in the show but his green face is not far behind.

Grove, however, only heads a cast of talented performers. Lou Fryman, as Finian, probably has the best Irish accent on campus, and played the little Irishman with talent. His pains were ap-
