

Academic Honesty —

(Continued from page one) tions for academic offenses such as cheating were in the hands primarily of the student's professor, the dean of his college, and the Senate Committee on Student Affairs subcommittee on discipline.

Under the new code, a committee composed of three faculty members and two students, appointed by the dean of the college, will be established in each college to hear cases.

Committee Is Court

The student-faculty committees, to be known as College Committee on Academic Honesty, will act as the disciplinary court for all first offenses of unpremeditated and premeditated cheating. But first offenses of cooperative, premeditated cheating, involving collusion will continue to go directly to the Senate subcommittee on discipline.

One of the student members on the College Committee on Academic Honesty will be a third semester sophomore and the other will be a fifth semester junior enrolled in the college. The student members will continue to serve until graduation. Vacancies will be filled by appointment of third semester students.

Committee Chairman

The chairman of the committee will be the college's representative on the Senate subcommittee on discipline.

In addition, another group, to be known as the Intercollege Committee on Academic Honesty, will meet to discuss uniformity of penalty, but not to make policy. The committee will be composed of one representative from each College Committee on Academic Honesty.

The Senate subcommittee on discipline will still remain the final appeal body for all decisions. The subcommittee is composed of four administration members, and three students. The dean of men or women, the dean of the student's college, the chairman of the Senate Committee on Student Affairs and the director of student affairs, are the committee's administration members and the All-University president or Women's Student Government president, the chairman of Tribunal or Judicial, and the president of the student council of the student's college are the committee's student members.

To Promote Honesty

The Senate subcommittee on academic honesty will continue to function "to promote honesty in the classroom in a positive way," Kenworthy said.

The plan for dealing with cheating remains substantially unchanged from the one recommended by the 1954 student encampment. It was endorsed by All-University Cabinet.

Committee Positions

Students interested in serving on the All-University Elections Committee, Food Committee, and the Cabinet secretarial staff may apply until noon Saturday at the Hetzel Union desk.

Applicants will be interviewed by Cabinet Personnel Interviewing Committee, composed of the nine presidents of the College councils, on May 18.
