270 Bowlers May Use New Alleys

Approximately 270 more students will be able to take bowling in their physical education classes next semester, Glenn N. Thiel, professor of physical education, said yesterday.

The six new alleys now being installed in the basement addition to Recreation Hall will permit the larger classes, Thiel said.

This semester, as in the past, he said, about 64 students can schedule bowling classes every eight weeks. Classes are held in a borough commercial firm, and will continue to be held there, Thiel said.

The new alleys will be completed about June 1 and will go into operation as soon after that as possible, Thiel said. The semi-automatic pin setters are being installed now, he said, adding that the alley beds have already been installed.

Work on four new alleys to be put in White Hall will start this week, he added.

Thiel said plans are tentatively set for opening the alleys for recreation bowling every evening from 4 to 7. The program probably will include faculty and staff bowling and mixed bowling, besides the definitely decided upon intramural and tournament bowling, he said.

The new alleys will necessitate the hiring of pin boys for recreation bowling, Thiel pointed out. A nominal charge will be made for the use of the alleys to help alleviate the cost of construction, Thiel added.

FMA Names Executive Unit

The board of trustees of the Fraternity Marketing Association an executive committee has been established to function between meetings of the board of trustees.

The committee is composed of Harold W. Perkins, assistant dean of men; Robert J. Grace, assistant professor of fuel technology; Robert K. Murray, assistant professor of history; E. R. Emmers, University statistician; and John Seastone, sixth semester hotel administration major.

The board will issue contracts to vendors on the semester basis rather than the eight week basis previously used.

The board established five standing committees; expansion, membership, quality and standard, services and publicity, and contract.

Final Gift Voting Planned This Month

Final voting for senior class gift and senior class honors will not take place until late this month or early June when copies of LaVie are distributed, according to Faith Gallagher, chairman of the senior class gift committee, and Alexander Zerban, chairman of the seniors honors committee.

Dave Carvey, editor of LaVie, announced approximate dates for LaVie distribution yesterday. Carvey hoped they would be available by June 3, at the latest.

The Senior gift and senior honors will not be announced until the Class Night program, scheduled for June 10.

Preliminary voting for the class gift will be completed by the end of the week, Miss Gallagher said last night. A list of nine possibilities has been given to Panhellenic Council, Interfraternity Council, Leonides, and the Association of Independent Men. Results from these groups will be used to aid the gift committee in selecting the five gift suggestions for final voting, Miss Gallagher announced.

Attendance Was Poor

The gift committee originally planned to hold the preliminary voting at the class mixer, held May 1. Attendance was so poor at this function that a representative vote could not be collected, according to Miss Gallagher.

The committee was holding the preliminary voting so that they could have a representative idea of what most of the senior class wanted, she added.

Included in the preliminary suggestions are furnishings for a social lounge for the Helen Eaken Eisenhower Chapel, furnishings for the chapel itself, such as pews and hymn books, a Centennial scholarship fund, and a still life painting by Franklin Watkins of the Pennsylvania Art Academy.

Remaining Suggestions

Other suggestions in the group include a Centennial monument, a recreation lodge for students in the vicinity of Beaver Dam, contributions for a new auditorium, and television sets for living units.

Zerban revealed the schedule of events for Class Night activities. The salutatorian address will open the ceremonies followed by the presentation of the men's and women's honor awards. Entertainment with singing and music is

'Theater' to Give Rosenfeld Play

"Choosing a Partner," an original one-act play by Michael Rosenfeld, sixth semester arts and letters major, will be tonight's 5 O'Clock Theater presentation at 5 p.m. in the Little Theater, Old Main.

Featured in the cast are Joyce Andruzak, Barbara Kinnier, Nancy Coulter, Gerald Denisof, Kenneth Williams, and Edwin Grove. The play is being directed by Deborah Peek, eighth semester arts and letters major.

next on the agenda and is followed by presentation of the class gift.

Acceptance of Gift

An administrative representative of the University will accept the gift on behalf of the University. Following this will be the Paul Smith Memorial Award to the outstanding senior in physical education. The event will close with the valedictorian address and the singing of the Alma Mater.

The men's honor awards will be introduced by an honor student, the class donor. He will tell the history of the class and introduce the spoon man. The spoon man will introduce the barrel man who will in turn introduce the cane man. The cane man will introduce the pipe orator who will deliver the "pipe oration."

Introduction of Bow Girl

Womens honors will be introduced by the women's class donor who will introduce the bow girl. The bow girl will introduce the slipper girl who will introduce the fan girl. The fan girl will introduce the class poet who will read the class poem. She will then introduce the mirror girl who will deliver the "mirror oration."
