

Fall Registration Plan Announced by Williams

Registration procedure for the fall semester will be the same as they were this semester, except a change in the alphabetical registration of students, Dean of Admissions C. O. Williams said yesterday.

Students whose names fall between Lan and Ode will register first, on Wednesday morning, September 14. Students must register for themselves. Penalties will be imposed on any students breaking registration rules by having someone else register for them, Williams said.

Springman To Direct Dance Band

Charles Springman, junior in music education from Springdale, will direct the Phi Mu Alpha, national men's music fraternity, dance band in a concert at 3 p.m. tomorrow in Schwab Auditorium.

The band will open the concert with its theme, "Starlight Dreams." The group will then play "Dynaflow," "Street of Dreams," and "Penthouse Serenade."

Fred Waring, Jr. and his Dixieland Combo will continue the concert with a 15-minute presentation of Dixieland.

The dance band will return with "Man With the Horn," "String of Pearls," "Opus in Pastels," "All the Things You Are," "September Song," and "Love for Sale."

The introduction of members of the dance band will follow the appearance of Chuck Torrence and his Progressive Quartet.

The program will conclude with the band playing "Stardreams," "I've Got My Love to Keep Me Warm," "April in Paris," "Walk, Don't Run," "Artistry in Boogie," and their theme.

The concert is open to the public. The doors will open at 2:30 p.m.

The parade route will follow College up to Burrowes avenue, where the groups will divide and march off separately. The reviewing stand will probably be at the main entrance to the University on College avenue, Captain R. H. Groff, professor of Naval Science and Armed Forces Day project officer, said yesterday.

Centennial ...

Sparks Welcomed By Eager Students

"Watch for the Sparks" was the students' spontaneous and light-hearted welcome for Dr. Edwin Earle Sparks, who began his duties as President May 11, 1908.

Two days after President Sparks' arrival on campus, each school of the College was represented with a float portraying its activities, but perhaps the one that most caught the public fancy was that of the engineers. It carried hot-air engines belching fire and smoke under a big sign: "Watch for the Sparks."

The sign was a forecast of the future, for in the years that followed, those who "watched for the sparks" could find them in the ideas of the new President for improving the College and expanding its services.

President Sparks' arrival marked a reparture in the relationship between the President and his students. With the advent of Dr. Sparks, the president of the College became "prexy" to all the students.

'Poor Boy' Story

Like most of his seven predecessors as president of the College, President Sparks' story was that of the poor boy who worked his way through school and college. But unlike most of them he seemed to have taken himself less seriously and to be less inclined to expressing himself in moral platitudes.

He was reportedly expelled from the strict Ohio Wesleyan University, either for smoking or for his part in a banned May Day parade poking fun at the school's administration.

President Sparks attended high school in London, Ohio, and in the fall of 1879 he entered Ohio Wesleyan University. After a year he transferred to Ohio State University and earned his tuition and living expenses reporting news for the Ohio State Journal and working in a book store.

Becomes Principal

In 1890, President Sparks was invited by President George W. Atherton of the University to become principal of the school's preparatory department.

In a statement of his educational policy President Sparks demanded that the College be kept before the people. He personally did more than his share in carrying the College to the people.

Probably President Sparks' greatest achievement in extending the services of the College beyond the borders of the campus was his building up of the extension division.

Another aspect of the broadening service of the College was the establishment of the first summer session in 1910. The first summer session had an enrollment of 146 students; at the end of President Sparks' tenure, the enrollment had grown to 1045.

Dr. Sparks, however, was not one to sacrifice scholastic standards for numbers. One of his favorite jokes was, "Let us make scholarship one of the major college sports," but he seriously held to a statement in his initial outline of policy that "additional numbers of students, without a fixed standard of scholarship, are no permanent value educational-ly."

Efforts Were Strain

During World War I, President Sparks' efforts to put all the College's facilities to the services of the nation during the war were a severe strain. He suffered a nervous breakdown, and the Board of Trustees granted him a year's leave of absence. At the end of two months, Dr. Sparks decided that he could not resume the duties of heading the institution. The board accepted his resignation in January 1920. He was asked to remain on campus as a lecturer on American history.

Correction

Last night Ronald Griffes, president of Alpha Chi Rho, said that he did not know where a student who had stolen articles from his fraternity had become intoxicated before the thefts occurred. Griffes further stated that any stories to the contrary were rumors.

It was incorrectly reported in yesterday's Daily Collegian that Griffes thought the same student had become inebriated at Alpha Chi Sigma.
